County hit with grievances for opening lagoon

FEDERAL AND state agencies have filed actions against Monterey County for side-stepping the required permit process in breaching the Carmel River, which drained the lagoon. A natural wetland, the Carmel lagoon's appearance changes dramatically with draining. The picture on top shows the area almost completely under water, while the photo below it is the same area only two days later, after the river was allowed to flow to the ocean. (Mac McDonald photos.)

By DAVID LELAND

THE STATE Coastal Commission and U.S. Corps of Engineers have filed separate grievances against the county for opening a passageway to the ocean from the Carmel River.

Last week, after above-normal rains, county public works officials bulldozed a sand bar away from the river mouth to release water and prevent the Carmel lagoon from flooding low-lying homes.

And while state and federal officials agree that the action was needed to prevent flooding, they add that there is a correct process which must be followed.

"We believe a permit was required for the work," said Rob Lawrence, corps biologist, adding that his agency has filed a letter of violation to the county.

Penalties include fines, total restoration and a belated permit.

A number of agencies are involved in the lower Carmel River, which takes in the river from Highway 1 to the ocean. Those include the county, state Parks and Recreation Department, Fish and Game Department, Coastal Commission, Coastal Conservancy, Corps of Engineers, Carmel River Steelhead Association and various environmental groups.

Meanwhile, the Coastal Commission has issued an after-the-fact "stop-work" order, according to Les Strnad, chief of permits for the Central Coast office.

"There was an indication that I was being unreasonable," said Strnad, referring to the stop-work order. "That's not the issue; it (bulldozing) requires a permit to breach rivers."

Strnad said the county was notified in 1987 that it was illegal to simply bulldoze the sand away from the river mouth without at least checking by telephone with state officials.

"It's a matter of getting people informed," Strnad said. "We thought we had a handle on the Carmel River. But because of the drought something slipped between the cracks."

While funding for opening the river mouth is carried out by the county Water Resources Agency, the actual work is performed by public works.

"They each thought the other one was handling negotiations," said Mary Wright, district superintendent for state Parks and Recreation Department.

Joe Madruga, assistant general mangager for the Water Resources Agency, said it costs between $3,000 and $5,000 for the initial breaching of the river mouth.

That, however, is a mere pittance compared to what a permit application entails.

The cost is believed to be between $100,000 and $200,000 in environmental studies and application fees.

'There was an indication that I was being unreasonable. That's not the issue; it (bulldozing) requires a permit to breach rivers.'

— Les Strnad
— Coastal Commission

That is precisely the reason neither water resources nor public works agencies are clamoring for a permit.

"We're both real concerned about who is going to undertake the permit activity," Madruga said, adding that the two agencies will meet on the issue by mid-April. "Ultimately, the board of supervisors will have to decide."

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman was vacationing at press time and was unavailable for comment.

Madruga said neither his agency nor public works currently has enough money to undertake the permit process.

He added part of the funding may have to be picked up by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, which benefits directly from river flow.

Wright said that a number of criteria is included in that agency's decision.

Wright pointed to the speed and amount of river flow, tide conditions, weather forecast, depth of lagoon and the time of day. Heavy equipment cannot operate in the area after dark.

Referring to homes built almost directly on top of wetlands, Wright said the problem is somewhat man-made.

"Under today's criteria that (Mission Fields) probably would not be an area where homes would be built," she said.

Recovery Center facing difficulties staying open

By DAVID LELAND

LESS THAN four years after a royal opening attended by the King of Spain, the Clint Eastwood Recovery Center is struggling to stay afloat.

Originally intended to serve peninsula youngsters experiencing alcohol and drug problems, the center has been faced with an uphill battle of low census and decreased insurance funding.

"You have to have a kid that's near death to keep him in a treatment program," said Christy Shannon, director, referring to how insurance companies have slashed funding for treatment centers in recent years.

The result: in the past two years, the number of adolescent treatment centers between the peninsula and Bay Area has fallen from 15 to only three (including the Clint Eastwood Recovery Center).

While the Clint Eastwood Recovery Center attempted to sidestep a financial crisis by closing its in-patient program and offering only out-patient services last summer, that apparently was not enough.

Last week four employees were laid off, after the center's census stood at zero for the past three weeks. The staff now stands at a full-time counselor and part-time teacher.

"We just couldn't continue to operate the expensive program we had without kids in it," said Jim Jennifer, vice president of administration at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. "Coverage is so limited it's almost impossible to run a viable program."

Jennifer said just about every child who has taken advantage of the program received some sort of auxiliary funding from the community sponsor program.

"There's a lot of young people with a need," said Jennifer, adding the community has pitched in about $300,000 in aid. "But often they come from families of parents with alcohol and drug probelms and limited insurance."

Many affluent members of the community either are in denial that their children have a substance-abuse problem or they choose to seek treatment elsewhere to remain anonymous, Jennifer said.

Shannon said next week several youths are signed up to begin treatment at the center; she declined to provide the exact number.

'We just couldn't continue to operate the expensive program we had without kids in it. Coverage is so limited it's almost impossible to run a viable program.'

— Jim Jennifer

"We are rather proud that we have even kept the day-care program open," she said.

The center is geared for between 15 and 20 youths.

SHANNON BLAMED the "Just Say No" campaign mentality, in part, for society turning away from those suffering from the disease.

"We're fighting a drug war," she said. "We've restigmatized the illness."

As a result, those who are in dire need of help are being told to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps, rather than seek medical help.

"It's (drug war) really had a negative effect on those who already have the problem," she said.

Clint Eastwood, who provided $100,000 in seed money for the center, agreed that the insurance industry is remiss in its attitude.

"The insurance industry is treating alcohol and drugs as a crime, rather than an illness," he said.

Inners vs. Outers

Dear Editor:

David Leland's interview of David Maradei in the March 14 Pine Cone placed great emphasis on whether or not CRA members live inside or outside of Carmel's one square mile. The issue needs further elaboration.

Under state law, all California counties have a Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) one of whose duties is to determine specific "spheres of influence" for incorporated cities – or that area which is most affected by actions taken by said cities.

CRA has always offered its membersship to any person living in Carmel or its sphere of influence. To deny membership or recognition to a person who does not live "in Carmel" seems short-sighted, if not provincial.

Persons living in the area adjoining Carmel are certainly affected by Carmel's problems and the decisions of the city council. They provide a valuable resource of leadership and perspective on their individual neighborhoods as well. Many of these "outers" are actively engaged in organizations and city committee which contribute to the rich fabric of Carmel.

The CRA board has only two members who do not reside within Carmel's city limits. However, we would have no problem with more. It would be counter-productive to deny board membership to an interested, informed and intelligent person because his or her house is a block too far north or east.

As for Leland's implied criticism of naming a "Citizen of the Year" who is not an "inner," let's look at this year's award winner – Enid Sales. Her most well-known activities all specifically affect the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. She is in charge of the historic survey of Carmel's houses. She was the leading force in preserving Carmel's First Murphy. She was appointed by Carmel's mayor to sit on Carmel's Preservation Committee.

So does it really matter on which side of the line a dedicated volunteer's house lies

What's in a name?

Dear editor

I enjoyed very much your article by David Leland "What is the CRA and where is it taking Carmel?"

I was very interested in Mr. Maradei's comment stating that I thought the CRA should be condemned and viewed with a certain cynicism.

I recall writing a guest article in The Pine Cone some time ago stating a residential organization could be very beneficial to the community. My main concern with the CRA is that its title seems somewhat contracictory, i.e., a number of its members, including several board members and past president, are not residents of Carmel.

It appears from the article that decisions are being formed by a board of 15, rather than its total membership.

Mr. Maradei states, "We didn't come here to profit from business or to reconstruct new houses." It seems the only time he deviates from his hard-line attitude toward new construction is when he wants a height variance on his own home in the residential district, much to the chagrin of his neighbors.

He also goes on to state that councilmembers Brooks, Wright and White are encouraged to be independent thinkers, devoid of influence by his organization.

One would be hard pressed to find an example of these three councilmembers voting against the CRA line.

But I did enjoy the interview and think the Pine Cone's Q&A format should continue in the future.

Urgent appeal

Dear Editor:

"It's a critical need; I've got to do my part." That was what I said to myself some time ago. The need was the American Red Cross. My part – my volunteer support and my financial support.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter is stable and running efficiently. Support from the public in the past has demonstrated an understanding of the value of services the Red Cross provides our community. I do hope you will join me in doing your part – supporting the American Red Cross.

Thank you.

A little clarifying

Dear Editor:

The recent article concerning the Carmel Youth Center (CYC) may have been misleading. The CYC is not mired in a financial crisis, however, we are in need of raising money to cover operating costs at the center.

The weather definitely did not cooperate on Saturday, our biggest day of the AT&T golf tournament, and coupled with the loss of the food concessions at Poppy Hills cost us about $20,000.

The good news is that both Poppy Hills and The Monterey Golf Foundation have hinted at supporting the CYC with gifts later this year. We also plan a fund-raising drive to help make up the difference in our budget. If we come up short there are options we may need to take to lessen expenses which might include shorter hours.

The CYC Board was upset with references to adult parties at the center. They asked me to clarify to the public that the adult parties held at the center were one thank-you party for the generous people who helped remodel the snack bar, Checkers, and there were several fund-raisers to help the CYC, Carmel High School and River School.

I also want to make it clear that all the expenses of operating the CYC fall on the Board of Directors of the CYC. We have allowed the City of Carmel to house their Recreation Department in the center, rent free, in exchange for secretarial and administrative skills and services.

We would like to continue improving our relationship with the Recreation Department and are currently meeting with city officials in hopes of establishing a fair way of sharing costs at the center There has not been a full-time Recreation Director since July 1990 and the city has saved considerable money.

We are hopeful that the Carmel City Council will see the importance of the CYC and Recreation Department relationship and will not let our efforts to date slip backwards.

Inappropriate interruptions

Dear Editor:

It was a great privilege to see and hear the renowned Luciano Pavarotti last weekend in Pebble Beach.

What disturbed me, however, was the chatting and munching of goodies while Mr. Pavarotti was singing beautiful arias. It appeared as if these people were sitting in front of their television sets with beverages, conversing idly as though this great performer (or others who were trying to enjoy his performance), could not hear these inappropriate interruptions.

I am astonished that people can be so insensitive and discourteous to their patrons.

A broad view

Dear Editor:

For many years residents on the Monterey Peninsula who live north of the Carmel River, west of Highway 1 and south of the Del Monte Forest have had a community focus that is the village of Carmel.

Although unable to vote as Carmel residents, they take an interest in issues affecting the village. They may rent boxes at the post office and go each day to pick up their mail and enjoy the camaraderie of the daily encounters there.

Ocean Avenue is considered the Main Street in their lives. Banks, churches, grocery stores and restaurants are patronized by them. When elections come around, they contribute to campaigns, they stand outside the post office to hand out leaflets or collect signatures. Most candidates for Carmel offices welcome their help and are appreciative of these volunteers, even though they cannot vote.

The Pine Cone must want to reach these people and encourage their readership. Why else would the Pine Cone have merged with the Carmel Valley Outlook? So, for this same publication to imply that the people who have joined together to form the Carmel Residents Association should not present their Citizen of the Year award to one of these hard-working, dedicated-to-the-community non-voters seems to me to be a very narrow-minded, even a mean-spirited attitude for a newspaper that purports to be concerned about the area-at-large.

Of course what I have been referring to is March 14's Pine Cone interview with Dvid Maradei, vice president of the Carmel Residents Association Board of Directors.

In that interview the Pine Cone's questions reflected the paper's parochial view of this area, arguing that the Citizen of the Year award should only go to Carmel residents. And yet for years everyone who has a sense of Carmel as more than an island has talked of Carmel's "sphere of influence."

And by the way, it is because of this "sphere of influence" that Carmelites (including the city council) are so concerned about the future of Mission Ranch. Even the Pine Cone is interested in that subject, though no strictly a Carmel subject!

I say "good for the CRA" to hve a broad view not only of what is best for Carmel but also of who its leaders are.

GUEST EDITORIAL

By Howard Nieman, Jr.

A new Carmel

THE LONG-STANDING rift between Carmel residents and businesses is at last ending.

Last Wednesday, the Carmel Planning Commission began discussing changes to commercial district zoning which promise to make Carmel a more enjoyable village to live and work in. The meeting was well attended and many good ideas discussed. It was a good start.

These zoning regulations play a large role in determining the type of restaurants we eat in, the kind of stores we shop in and the overall social and economic environment of the village. Like it or not, these regulations have a far greater daily impact on you and me than we realize. Until now, residents and businesses have not had the opportunity to sit down, face-to-face and honestly discuss their interests without being constrained by decades of outdated and meaningless slogans and ideas about the way things work in Carmel.

The council's trust and confidence in our planning commission is well placed and deserves unanimous support. Some months ago, the city council wisely asked the planning commission to study commercial district zoning. This was a good decision because it provided for non-political analysis and debate on not only the technical aspects of zoning, but the role of the business district in Carmel life. Removing politics from land-use planning is long overdue. Elected officials have too often automatically rejected all ideas which sought to transform Carmel into a more socially and culturally dynamic village.

Fortunately, the planning commission has placed everything on the table for discussion and change. I am delighted at this open-minded approach. It is exciting to think about the opportunity at hand. And, with early support and participation by resident and business associations, the end-result will have solid community support to make the council's decisions on the final report quick and easy to make. Moreover, the planning commission is considering hosting a Town Hall meeting to provide for a free and open discussion of ideas.

Above all, the climate is ripe for change. Measure E is behind us. More and more I hear people say they are tired of no live music in Carmel, no sidewalk cafes and meaningless, complex regulations which serve no purpose except to prevent many new and popular uses found in other cities from being enjoyed here.

I'm tired of hearing that the only real Carmel is old Carmel. We need to look at a new Carmel – one where residents and businesses work together to improve our community and draw residents back downtown to enjoy the many wonderful businesses we have. A healthier business district is good for everyone and makes Carmel a more liveable city. And that is an excellent goal!

Personally, I look forward to Sunday brunches and evenings at a sidewalk cafe or restaurant tucked away in a courtyard listening to a local musician. That is a new Carmel I would enjoy. I suspect we all would enjoy helping Carmel become a 1990's version of what it offered to us years ago: something a little different but with character, energy and style. In other words, a Carmel that is as much fun to live in as it is to visit.

Heavy rains head off any increase in rationing

By FRANK GEORGE

THE RELENTLESS, driving rains that have pummeled Carmel and its environs came just in the nick of time.

Former Carmel City Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo and the rest of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's conservation committee had spent months planning for tighter rationing than the current 20 percent. The chairwoman was poised to present stringent new guidelines at the March 25 water board meeting, but: "thank goodness we don't have to implement them," she said.

In fact, the water district's board of directors will probably lessen the restrictions. The welcome rains have encouraged plans that include courtesy notices and honor systems rather than warnings and fines, directors decided at the meeting, held Monday at Monterey City Council Chambers.

Final decisions on reducing the rationing levels was deferred to the April 22 board meeting. A public hearing on the issue will be held on that date.

"My gut feeling is, if the aquifer doesn't fill, we want to keep tracking (water use) and providing courtesy notices," Chairman Dale Hekhuis recommended. He and his counterparts agreed levels lower than 20 percent should suffice, based on encouraging statistics presented by Darby Fuerst, district water supply manager.

Fuerst said rainfall records for the month of March could be shattered by April Fool's Day. He said the peninsula was blessed with 14.7 inches of rain since October, while the average precipitation rate for that period is 18 inches.

That means the rainfall level is now at 82 percent of the normal rate, Fuerst told the board.

Moreover, the watershed (the underground water source where most of the district's tapwater comes from), is filled to capacity in the upper-Carmel Valley and the lower-valley portion should swell to 80 or 90 percent by the end of April.

Currently, the water storage level in the watershed has surpassed numbers recorded at this time last year.

However, Fuerst said there is no way of predicting how much more rain is needed to bring the water supply to pre-drought levels. District hydrologist Joe Oliver said the last time the aquifer was completely full was in 1986. He added storage conditions are different this year though, due to four years of drought.

It's snowing, doggone it

BOB CARLISLE of Carmel grabbed his camera early Tuesday morning and rushed out into the streets of Carmel to take photos of the snow/sleet storm that hit the Monterey Peninsula. He took this shot looking south on Dolores Street just in time to catch an obviously cold and confused dog sprinting down the empty street. Heavy rains and cold weather combined to form the unseasonal snowstorm.

IN OTHER business, Henrietta Stern, district project coordinator, said a 16,000-acre-foot New Los Padres Dam combined with a three-million-gallon-per-day desalination plant should suffice for a long-term water supply.

A 24,000-acre-foot dam had been the district's pet project since 1989, but Stern said the smaller barrier would flood less wilderness lands and if combined with a desalination plant, it could fulfill district needs during future water emergencies.

Stern said Jim Cofer, district general manager, and Andy Bell, planning manager, are trying to calculate a price tag for the two projects. She said the two should have figures by March 29.

In other action, directors unanimously approved a program that would double the steelhead spawning habitat in two portions of the Carmel River. The approval was non-binding.

The project calls for $11,665 in district funds up front as well as upkeep costs ranging from no cost to $20,000 annually.

Under the restoration project guidelines, the district will apply for a $72,723 grant from the California Department of Fish and Game, which would pay for the bulk of the initial costs.

Spawning gravel would be poured into portions of of the riverbed below the Los Padres and San Clemente dams.

Before the dams were built in 1921 and 1948, the gravel skirted evenly along the bottom with the streamflow, but it has since remained trapped at the heads of the reservoirs, a staff report said. Maintenance will be required when storm flows wash the gravel away.

The staff report said the California State Legislature wants to double the steelhead and salmon population in the state by the year 2000. The report said the project is in keeping with this policy.

There is room for 264 fish "nests" in the areas currently the report reads, but that number is not enough to accommodate fishermen and ensure a substantial juvenile population. Over a million eggs can be deposited in 264 nests, but only 15 percent, or 554, of them will survive to adulthood.

Planners consider making changes in Carmel's commercial zoning

By EVE BRITTON

PENSIVE FACES prevailed at the Carmel Planning Commission's March 20 study session, as commissioners grappled with the concept of change in the commercially zoned area of Carmel's "urban forest."

"We are dealing with two parallel roads," said Commissioner Jack Kennedy. "We have what

'It's a whole different business community than when I grew up here. Take the service zone, people cannot afford to operate a service in Carmel.'

— Philip Coniglio

the regulations say and what's really happening.

"To bridge the gap we need to get back to the elements in the General Plan," he said. "And it's not going to be easy."

Commissioners listened intently to staff reports listing problems with the current zoning process. Most of the problems revolved around restrictions and the complicated process applicants must endure to get a permit.

"I'd like to see flexibility," Commissioner Philip Coniglio, Jr. said. "We get so legalistic it sometimes kills spirit."

Commissioner Brian Congleton echoed Coniglio's sentiments, adding that he thought the planning commission needs to clarify the often-cumbersome language of ordinances.

"We need to take the time to do our own housecleaning," he said. "As far as legalize, I think we should sit down and throw it all out."

The study session was planned as a way for planning commission members to look over city staff findings about the state of the three commercial zones and come to some conclusions about how the current zoning structure is working.

One of the most basic problems addressed was the breakdown of the three commercial zone districts. The districts include the Residential-Limited Commercial District (RC), for the least intensive commercial uses such as offices; the Service Commercial District (SC), for less intense commercial uses such as gas stations; and the most intensive uses such as retail stores are located in the Central Commercial Land Use District (CC).

"Do we really need three commercial zones in a town this small?" Commission Chairwoman Carla Ramsey asked.

"We need to open our eyes on whether we need this tiered level creating tiered rents," Congleton said.

'Do we really need three commercial zones in a town this small?'

— Carla Ramsey

Commissioners and audience members said the three zones did more to encourage segregation in the community than two districts would.

"There is an ongoing myth in this town pitting the business person against the residential per-

Mayor seeks a separate design review board

By EVE BRITTON

FORMATION OF a separate design review committee, falling under the direction of the Carmel City Council, as opposed to the Carmel Planning Commission, is scheduled to be discussed at the regular city council meeting, Tuesday, April 2 at 4 p.m. in the city council chambers.

The separate design review committee (or commission), is being considered because of large voter interest in the recently defeated Measure E, according to Mayor Jean Grace.

Grace is seeking council concurrence to put the issue on the council's May 7th agenda.

If a committee is established, a statement from Grace said, "members of the planning commission be given a choice as to their preference on which of these two bodies they would prefer to serve."

Grace said that certain goals were established at a workshop meeting in January, and that those goals should be discussed.

"One of those goals was that the council review the R-1 design standards adopted in 1990," she said. "A discussion regarding an independent committee should be part of any such review."

Most of the public hearings on April's agenda deal with appeals from the planning commission.

The first item concerns Cedric and Patricia Choi's use permit application for a proposed three-unit condominium complex on Mission between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

An administrative determination by commissioners found the Chois alloted time for using the permit had lapsed. Cedric Choi appealed the commission's ruling, saying the permit had been caught in a bind between satisfying the planning commission's requirements and those for a Coastal Permit.

In its Jan. 31 meeting, the planning commission upheld its decision, bringing Choi to appeal to the city council.

Council members will also consider an appeal for a sign proposed on the awning in front of a building on the northwest corner of Mission and Sixth. The appellant is the Cottage Gallery, which is looking to place a second identifying sign at the business.

Trees are also on the agenda, as council members will hear the second reading of an ordinance calling for a value assessment of trees on public property.

Council members will also hear a report from the Architectural Preservation Committee, which will provide the council with a list of significant buildings and sites in Carmel.

City Forester Gary Kelly will also deliver a report on the city's subpotable water delivery program and provide policy guidance on the future of the program.

New schools head set to reorganize administrative staff

By DAVID LELAND

IN WHAT can be construed as his first official act as incoming CUSD superintendent, Vance Baldwin is set to reorganize a part of the district office's administrative staff.

"When I was considering the board's offer, I had to start thinking about what the administrative team would look like," said Baldwin, referring to negotiations between himself and the CUSD Board of Trustees earlier this year. "It (reorganization) can be characterized as our first move in terms of getting organized for next year."

The change, which was heard this week by the CUSD Board of Trustees, was triggered by the retirements of CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise; Lila Johnson, supervisor of fiscal services; and Ed Goodrick, former supervisor of maintenance, operations and transportation.

"This (retirements) allows us an opportunity to reorganize the district office," said Baldwin, current assistant superintendent, who will take over from Infelise Sept. 1. "The bottom line is we are eliminating one management position and saving between $40,000 and $50,000."

Savings from the reorganization will be channeled back into the district's general fund, Baldwin said.

Rosemary Montgomery, currently director of curriculum and instruction, is being promoted to assistant superintendent.

In her new position, which will begin Sept. 1, Montgomery will be in charge of curriculum, instruction and certified personnel.

Johnson's duties will be merged into a new position: director of business and support services.

The position is a consolidation of tasks currently held by Johnson and Baldwin. Areas of responsibility include school finance, budget development, support services and classified personnel.

Barbara Beck, who will serve as coordinator of child care programs, will receive more responsibilities and a 10-percent raise.

Baldwin said he also expects to begin recruitment to fill Goodrick's position, which is currently being divided by two workers.

Don't look for wholesale changes or a house cleaning, however, Baldwin said.

"I'm very comfortable with the work that other site administrators are doing," he said. "The district's on course."

Students of the month

SENIORS ROBERT Terry (left), and Cody West have been selected students of the month by the industrial arts department at Carmel High School. Terry, a student in Mr. Brooks' architectural drawing class, hopes to study to become an architect at the University of Washington. Terry's hobbies include making military models and woodworking — he is interested in all phases of architecture. West's interest in industrial arts comes naturally, since his father is a building contractor. West has worked at job sites during after school and summer. West, who hopes to become a civil engineer or major in construction at UC Davis, lives on a 2-acre farm in Carmel Valley. At CHS, West has taken part in frosh and JV football and, varsity cross country and golf. His interests include swimming, mountain hiking, road biking, running and water and snow skiing.

Recovery Center

Eastwood said he will continue to assist the center financially, but will not shoulder the entire burden.

"I will help raise funds as time goes on, but I don't know whether that will be enough or not," he said.

Jennifer said the program will continue to help area youth.

"We do not have plans just to say 'the heck with it,' " he said. "The hospital serves the needs of the community."

Shannon, who has extensive experience in the area of alcohol and drug treatment for adolescents, said she is confident that the center will remain solvent.

In addition to looking toward the community for ideas, she has plans to begin an after-school recovery program next fall. Students in that program would go to school and then come directly to the recovery center to begin taking part in that curriculum.

WRIGHT SAID she sympathized with county decision-makers, who watch a water marker in the lagoon indicating potential flood levels to make their decision.

"It's not like they can wait until it's at the red mark and open it (river)," she said. "We have to accept their judgment."

However, she disagrees with the overall affect of opening the river mouth.

"It's like pulling a stopper from a bathtub," she said, referring to the rapid outflow of water from the lagoon.

Wright said she agrees with environmentalists that wildlife and plants living in the lagoon probably prefer a natural course of events.

"The wildlife would have been in far better shape and health (without draining)," she said. "We want the lagoon to rise and be nourished by the flow."

Wright said a master plan is being prepared for the area by hydrologist John Williams, a plan which will attempt to balance issues.

Several years in the making, the study is being funded by the Steelhead Association, county and Coastal Conservancy.

The draft master plan, which is scheduled to be released next month, will examine a number of options for the wetland area from Highway 1 to the ocean, according to Jean Ferreira, resource ecologist with Parks and Recreation.

"There's a variety of things being looked at," she said.

However, Williams said lowering the levee on the south side of the river to flood the state-owned artichoke fields, as discussed in the study, will increase wetlands but stop short of alleviating the need to breach the river.

Another area being studied in the draft includes dredging the southern arms of the lagoon, which have become filled with silt through the years. After being dredged, the area would be planted with riparian shrubs that produce shade for steelhead to survive during the summer, Williams said.

Strnad said he will call a meeting between federal, state and county agencies in early April to discuss the correct process for breaching the river mouth.

Any plan, however, will likely run into opposition because of the various goals opposing groups have for the land.

Environmentalists believe that Monterey Peninsula Water Management District officials may have pulled the trigger too quickly in allowing the river to flow to the sea.

Water district officials have said that if the river flows to the ocean for two consecutive weeks, water rationing will end, which could put a finish to an unpopular role for the district in the community.

Also, the Carmel River Steelhead Association is also a proponent of allowing the river to flow to the sea as quickly as possible because it allows trout to spawn up river.

However, environmentalists such as Noel Mapstead believe that the river mouth will open naturally with the force of Mother Nature in the event of a 100-year flood.

"These are cutting issues," said Strnad, adding that there will be public hearings on the draft plan. "Can you have balanced use and management of all resources? We think you can."

Strnad is realistic of any outcome from the plan.

"Everybody will be happy a little bit," he said. "Nobody will get everything they want."

Rep. Panetta seeks funds for critical military projects

REP. LEON E. Panetta urged the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction March 21 to provide Fiscal Year 1992 funds for a number of critical projects at military installations in the 16th District.

A number of projects were included in the FY 1992 budget submitted by President George Bush. However, Panetta noted that the administration budget would delay until FY 1994 the $15 million federal share of the second phase of the Regional Sea Water Intrusion Project, a joint effort by Fort Ord and surrounding communities to end the contamination of local fresh water sources by sea water.

Panetta said that funding should be provided for the second phase no later that FY 1993. With Panetta's support, Congress approved funds last year for the federal contribution to the first phase of the project.

the FY 1992 projects discussed by Panetta were:

– $2.2 million for an addition to the Silas B. Hays Army Hospital at Fort Ord, including an emergency room, treatment and exam rooms, a trauma room, and x-ray and film processing rooms; Panetta noted that the current emergency room, designed to acoommodate 2,600 patients per month, now handles and average of 3,700 each month.

– $2.9 million for construction of a fire protection system in the historic Building 220 of the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

– $12 million for construction of a mechanical engineering construction building at the Naval Postgraduate School.

– $22 million for construction of 154 new housing units at Fort Hunter Liggett to accommodate employees of the Army's Test and Experimentation Command Evaluation Center (TEC) headquarters, which is being moved from Fort Ord.

– $4.7 million to modernize two open-bay enlisted barracks at Fort Hunter Liggett, also to accommodate personnel attached to the TEC; the current barracks do not meet the Army's minimum standards for living quarters.

– $6 million for construction of a classroom building at the Defense Language Institute (DLI) in Monterey, which would permit the DLI to discontinue leases of off-post class space which currently amount to some $534,000 annually.

– $324,000 for modernization and rehabilitation of the Known Distance Range at theArmy National Guard's Camp Roberts Facility in San Luis Obispo County, which would enable the National Guard to add a 600-yard firing line and make a number of other improvements required by Army standards.

Valley's rural quality a top priority for residents

By MAC McDONALD

IF CARMEL Valley residents had their druthers they'd just as soon see Carmel Valley Road stay as it is today, with perhaps a few safety improvements.

That appeared to be the consensus of those attending a standing-room-only "town meeting" held March 21 at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station.

Initiated by 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, whose district includes Carmel Valley, the meeting was to get public input into the county's recently completed Draft Environmental Impact Report on Carmel Valley Road Improvement Plan.

"This is the key document for Carmel Valley for the (Carmel Valley) Master Plan for any development we want to undertake for the next 20 years," Strasser Kauffman told the audience. "We wouldn't want to work on it without a lot of help from you."

The EIR, prepared by the San Francisco firm, Planning Analysis & Development and released last December, was necessitated by terms of the stringent Carmel Valley Master Plan, which requires constant monitoring of traffic conditions in Carmel Valley to see whether certain limits are being reached or exceeded. Once reached, these limits could force "trigger mechanisms" to be pulled, causing growth and development to be slowed or stopped entirely in the valley.

Thus the objectives of the EIR, as stated in the document, "are to present an independent and comprehensive review of the existing and expected traffic conditions in Carmel Valley, and make recommendations to traffic improvements that provide the desired level of service while maintaining rural quality."

For those packed into the small conference room, the operative words appeared to be "maintain rural quality," or how to make improvements to Carmel Valley Road without destroying or significantly altering the valley's rural quality.

"The people of the valley are concerned with the quality of life; adding more people and traffic detracts from the quality of life," said valley resident Rod Mills. "Is there an option? We don't want road improvements (if it will encourage development)."

Many of those in attendance concurred with Mills' opinion, in fact, at the end of the meeting one resident called for an informal vote to see who opposed four-laning a portion of Carmel Valley Road, a potential mitigation identified in the EIR. Virtually everyone in the room, officials excepted, opposed that option.

Four-laning Carmel Valley Road (from Via Petra to Robinson Canyon Road), is only one of the options, or mitigations, identified in the EIR in order to improve the level of service. Other mitigations included installing left-turn lanes and pockets, adding acceleration lanes, shoulder improvements and widening, signalization, grade separations, channelization and ingress-egress tapers, spot realignment, repainting lines, and minor interchanges.

According to George Divine, county public works engineer, Carmel Valley road is monitored twice a year at 12 different locations and that over the last three years the monitoring process has been refined to accurately reflect traffic levels.

"Carmel Valley Road is the most monitored road in Monterey County," Strasser Kauffman added.

Divine said several sections of the road are "getting close to the threshold," and identified three "problem areas": Robinson Canyon Road to Shulte Road, Shulte Road to Rancho San Carlos and Laureles Grade to Ford Road in Carmel Valley Village.

"Public works' responsibility is to implement all the mitigations," he said. "But each and every project has to be approved by the board (of supervisors. It's up to public works to process them and get it to the board."

Also at issue that night was how those improvements would be financed. Strasser Kauffman said $26 million in Measure B funds could be available pending a court decision, but added, "who knows if it will ultimately pan out." One thing she wanted to avoid was to have new development pay for improvements.

"If we're going to depend on future development (to pay for improvements), that's not an acceptable position to be in," she said.

She added that such lower-cost mitigations as channelization and left-turn lanes, "may be all we can afford."

While some residents at the meeting questioned figures in the EIR, funding or mitigations, at least one group felt the EIR didn't need revision, but to be completely tossed out.

"The Sierra Club feels that the C.V. Road EIR is so inadequate and inaccurate that it must be dismissed entirely, and that a new or subsequent EIR needs to be prepared and circulated anew," said a letter written by the club's Transportation Committee chairman, Noel Mapstead and read by Paula Berthoin.

The club's main objection to the EIR was that it relied too heavily on information from an "outdated" Final Environmental Impact Statement Caltrans is preparing for the controversial Hatton Canyon Freeway, a document the club claimed was not even available to the general public.

While acknowledging that the FEIS was not being circulated to the public, Gloria Root of Planning Analysis & Development said the existing environmental conditions would not change, that the consultants tried to use a worst-case scenario in their examples, and that they didn't rely on Caltrans' EIS to draw any conclusions in the CV Road EIR. "The document has a scenario that assumes the Hatton Canyon Freeway is not built," Root said.

'This is the key document for Carmel Valley for the (Carmel Valley) Master Plan for any development we want to undertake for the next 20 years. We wouldn't want to work on it without a lot of help from you.'
— Karin Strasser Kauffman

Others at the meeting expressed concerns about the safety of four-laning Carmel Valley Road; the feasibility of mass transit; the possibility of installing bicycle/pedestrian pathways and whether residents would have an opportunity to vote on any of the improvements to the road ("It's not something that would go to a vote," Strasser Kauffman said).

The public review period for the EIR, however, has been extended until 5 p.m. Friday, April 5. Those interested in adding their comments to the record can write to the Monterey County Planning and Building Inspection Dept. at PO Box 1208, Salinas 93902.

ROUNDUP

SPCA needs towels, linens

A plea to the general public is being made by the SPCA of Monterey County for clean towels, sheets, blankets and pillowcases for use in the animal shelter and wildlife center.

Blankets are used as comforters for the many puppies who are brought to the shelter because no one wants them. Prior to their being adopted, the shelter staff tries to make them as comfortable as possible and using blankets helps.

The greatest demand is for clean towels both in the shelter and in the wildlife center.

Donated items can be delivered to the SPCA animal shelter, 1002 Monterey-Salinas Highway 68 (across from Laguna Seca Recreation Area) any day of the week between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. If the donor has a significant quantity and cannot deliver them to the shelter, arrangements can be made to pick them up.

For more information, call 373-2631 or 422-4721.

Alzheimer's support group meets

The Alzheimer's Association of Monterey County is a non-profit organization committed to assisting caregivers and family of persons with Alzheimer's Disease or related dementia. Dementia is a medical term for the group of symptoms of deterioration of intellectual function such as memory loss, confusion, and impaired judgment that is severe enough to interfere with work of social activities.

The group offers information and support to help caregivers cope with the problems associated with dementia.

The Monterey office is located in Mariposa Hall at 801 Lighthouse Ave. The group meets 1:30 to 3 p.m. the second Tuesday of the month and 5:15 to 6:45 p.m. the fourth Monday. For information, contact Toni Jacobsen at 647-9890.

Foster parent orientation set

Orientations for foster parents are set Tuesday, April 9 and 23, at Children's Services, 1352 Natividad Road, Salinas. For further licensing information call 899-8015 or 755-4660.

Re-entry students' support group

A Re-Entry Support Group is being organized by the Monterey Peninsula College Women's Program to assist students who are returning to school following an interruption in their studies.

The group offers re-entry students an opportunity to meet other students who are experiencing the same fears, concerns and excitement about returning to the classroom.

Jeanne Costello is the facilitator for the re-entry group which meets from noon to 1 p.m. each Monday in Social Science Building Room 204. For details, call 646-4276.

Assist the women's shelter

Do you feel domestic violence is a problem? Would you like to do something to help? Do you have three hours per week to volunteer?

If you answered "yes" to these questions, the YWCA Women's Shelter needs you. For more information, call Chris Hoffman, crisis line director, at 372-6300.

Commercial zoning

son," one audience member said. "We are one community."

Many audience members said they supported the work commissioners were doing on the zoning.

"I love what you are doing here, people have been talking about it for a long time," Marion Riley told them.

Audience members said the present system stifles not only resident and business relationships, but it also hurts the system of free enterprise.

"We strangle the free enterprise system," Alan Williams said. "You can put a McDonald's in Moscow, but you can't put it in Carmel."

Commissioners agreed free enterprise in Carmel is costly and rents are often hard for small businesses to muster.

Coniglio, whose family owns the Mediterranean Market on Ocean Avenue, said he was concerned that small, family-owned "mom and pop" businesses were leaving town because of the high costs of doing business.

"It's a whole different business community than when I grew up here," he said. "Take the service zone, people cannot afford to operate a service in Carmel."

Commissioners agreed the commercial zoning district today, with its rigidity, "cumbersome (ordinance) language," and its three-tiered zoning system might not be the most effective system for Carmel.

The March 20 study session was a starting point for change. Commissioners decided the matter needed further studying and city planning staff was directed to develop and clarify the ideas presented in the session.

"We are redesigning the wheel here," Congleton said.

Commissioners have scheduled a special meeting of the planning commission to further study the issue at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 17 in the Carmel City Council Chambers.

Carmel police recover stolen object d'art

WITH THE assistance of a tip from a Southern California woman, Carmel police have recovered a $16,900 crystal horse head, stolen earlier this month from The Elegant Set.

Crafted by Lalique of France, the horse weighs almost 50 pounds and stands a little over 3 feet tall.

Police say that a man entered the store, located on San Carlos Street and Seventh Avenue, March 11 and, with the help of accomplices who distracted a salesperson, took the statue.

After receiving a phone call from a woman who had been offered the statue for sale, Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras travelled to Los Angeles to investigate further.

The trail soon led to Peter Nanka, 35, a longtime thief, who is also wanted in connection with the theft of a $49,000 painting by comedian Red Skelton.

Nanka, however, learned that police were closing in and fled to Salt Lake City, Utah. Nanka, a native of Australia, is currently free on a $8,000 immigration service bond.

Soon after arriving in Salt Lake, Nanka attempted to steal a Lalique crystal clock from a jewelry store and was caught.

Poitras contacted Salt Lake City police and was told Nanka was in custody. Nanka was arrested in jail for his part in the Carmel theft and is being held in lieu of $50,000 bail.

He is being charged with commercial burglary and grand theft.

THIS $16,900 Lalique horsehead, stolen earlier this month from The Elegant Set, has been returned to the fold. (David Leland photo.)

Doris Day's Best Friends

Brushing up on dental disease

YOU WOULDN'T let a day go by without brushing your teeth, but are you as conscientious about your pet's oral hygine? Without proper care, your pet is susceptible to abscessed teeth and gums caused by a build-up of plaque and tartar.

The best way to protect your pet from these problems is to start when the animal is still young. Once a day, use a cloth or gauze square to gently rub all your pet's teeth from the gumline to the tip. As he gets used to having his teeth wiped, try using a soft toothbrush with a dab of baking soda or toothpaste made especially for pets (available in health foods stores or from your veterinarian).

Once periodontal disease begins it's not reversible, and it's never too late to begin a teeth-cleaning regimen at home. If your pet shows any signs of infection like persistent bad breath, swollen or bleeding gums or loose teeth, have him checked by your veterinarian immediately. And be sure that his annual exam includes a "chopper check."

WE GET LETTERS...

Q. Doris, I've been hearing about acupuncture for pets! Does it work?

A. Although my pets have never had treatments, I've heard that acupuncture can bring great relief to painful areas. It works by stimulating precise reflex points on the body's surface with needles, ultrasound or laser. Practitioners believe that this stimulation corrects the body's energy imbalance and relieves pain.

Since the American Veterinary Medical Association recognized acupuncture as a valid treatment in 1988, the practice has "taken off." The treatments seem to be especially helpful in relieving chronic arthritis symptoms in older pets.

Q. My cat is in good health but she has lost some hair and has scaly patches on her skin. What should I do?

A. This is a question for your veterinarian. Your cat could have ringworm, a highly contagious condition that can spread to other pets and humans, especially children. It is treated with antifungal ointments or pills. Please see your veterinarian immediately.

Q. What's wrong with my cat, Tiffy? She's been yowling constantly although she doesn't seem to be in pain. She rubs against us with her tail in the air and she's been spraying in the house. Help!

A. Spring is in the air and Tiffy is probably an unspayed female, right? If so, run – don't walk – to your veterinarian and have her spayed! Please don't allow her to breed and add to the horrendous pet overpopulation problem! Also, a spayed female cannot develop cancer of the ovaries or infections of the uterus.

Q. My dog gets into my cat's food and I've heard it's not good for her. Is that an old wive's tale?

A. No, it's not. Dog food is especially formulated for dogs and cat food is made to fulfill a cat's nutritional requirements. Although an occasional nibble of your cat's food won't harm your dog, it should be avoided if possible. Feed your kitty on a counter or tabletop and keep his food away from your doggy. Cats require considerably more protein than dogs and a long-term cat diet would be very bad for Fido. Also, cat food has much more fat than your dog requires. So – watch it!

Q. I've been reading your column and have learned so much about the proper care of my dog. I now feed her rice, pasta and vegetables with some chicken or turkey, no bones, and she has her main meal in the late afternoon with me. What do you think would be good for her in the morning? We breakfast together before I go to work and I thought you might have some suggestions.

A. Feed her what you're having, of course! I give my older dogs a breakfast cereal like bite-size Shredded Wheat with non-fat milk and they love it. This particular cereal has no salt so it's especially good for my senior citizens. The younger dogs get Wheaties, Corn Flakes or any good granola cereal. Don't give them anything you wouldn't eat yourself – stay away from sweetened cereals with additives. Very young dogs can have a little low-fat milk on their cereal and you can use non-fat for everyone else.

My dogs also love toast and instead of butter you can use Heartbeat (very low in cholesterol) or low- or non-fat cottage cheese. Peanut butter is another favorite with my gang. They like a little spread on their toast! If you're having scrambled eggs, make a little extra and give that to your dog with some toast.

Before she goes to sleep she could have Milk-Bones (or another good doggy cookies from the pet store) as a treat. These hard cookies are good for her teeth and gums and she'll love having a nice bedtime snack.

Q. We have a new puppy and of course she isn't housetrained. We think the best place for her to sleep is in the garage where she can't make a mess. What do you think?

A. Boo – on you! That's a very bad idea! Your puppy is a member of the family and she should be warm, safe and cozy at night just like your children. I'm sure that your kitchen or utility

Hearing set for Title 21 county zoning ordinance

By SUSAN BECK

A SPECIAL public hearing for Title 21, the proposed zoning ordinance for the unincorporated area of Monterey County, is scheduled for Wednesday, April 3.

The hearing begins at 9 a.m. in the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Chambers in the courthouse in Salinas.

This may be the last chance for the public to voice their opinions concerning Title 21 to the Monterey County Planning Commission, said Tim Handley, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the proposed ordinance.

Dale Ellis, zoning administrator, for the Monterey County Planning and Building Inspection Department, will present a staff report on Title 21 to the board of supervisors for their approval or denial. He also plans to recommend that the board close any further opportunities for public comment on the proposed ordinance.

The planning commission made the first revisions to the zoning ordinance in 1988. Those revisions were met with a deluge of complaints from the public, which prompted the board of supervisors to create a citizens advisory committee.

The committee was assigned to review all of the county districts' area and general plans in addition to neighboring county regulations regarding land use and zoning. The committee has three representatives from each of the county's five districts.

The advisory committee's review of Title 21 required 3,000 hours. Handley said that the committee's endeavor developed a zoning ordinance that was far better than the one they started with because it expressed the desires of the county's residents.

After reviewing the CAC's work, the planning commission has come up with about 25 issues of concern in Title 21 that they will present to the board.

Several issues concern definitions, such as "structure" versus "building" in that a building would be something built with walls and roof for the purpose of shelter or housing of something as opposed to a structure, which is essentially anything built.

Other conflicts over definition include "construction" versus "development"; automobile wrecking yards; main buildings; caretakers' quarters; dwellings; hunting and fishing facilities; junkyards; open space; small livestock farming, and slope of a property.

Among other issues are agricultural, light, and heavy industrial zoning districts. For example, the staff recommendation would allow for a maximum building height of 35 feet unless superceded by a building height limit noted on the zoning map, which would limit building height to 50 feet. Additional height may be allowed upon securing a use permit in each case.

Additional issues include: location of structures in design control districts; waiver of use permit requirements in visual sensitivity districts; size of senior citizen units; size of guest houses; roof overhangs for manufactured housing units; regulations for home occupations; expansion of legal non-conforming residential uses; termination of non-conforming uses; enforcement provisions; and 30-percent slope regulations.

'Our call to the public is to get as many people as possible at the meeting and voice their support for the Title 21 document.'
— Tim Handley

In view of the fact that April 3 may be the last opportunity to challenge the planning commission's new proposals on Title 21, Handley said, "Our call to the public is to get as many people as possible at the meeting and voice their support for the Title 21 document. We are biased, but the more people that are there, the more likely we are to get it (Title 21) as a whole."

THIS & THAT

A fine blue line

IT RAINED on the parade of the Carmel Police Department March 15, but nothing dampened the sense of accord as officers and citizens shared commendations.

The department's ninth annual inspection and awards ceremony moved indoors – to the Carmel Youth Center. There, as in previous outdoor ceremonies, I was struck by the closeness between the department and the community; there is no sense of "them" against "us." The line between the Carmel Police Department and Carmel citizens is a fine one.

Police Chief Jack McGilvray started off the festivities with a tribute to the Carmel Police Officers Association, not only for the way in which salary negotiations were conducted but also for the group's help with two of the department's community programs: D.A.R.E. (Drug Awareness, Resistance, Education), and Seniors Helping Seniors. Then the parade of individual honorees began.

Michael Calhoun: Oficer of the Year (profiled previously in this column).

Kenneth O'Donovan: Employee of the Year. This award can go to a sworn officer such as Sgt. O'Donovan, or to a non-sworn employee. O'Donovan is the department's administrative sergeant and is also responsible for recruitment activity. Presenting the award, Chief McGilvray cited O'Donovan for his vigor and for completing each task "in an outstanding manner."

Daniel Clark: a special commendation for the way in which he managed a special study and training for the department's changeover in weapons.

Don Fuselier, Jon Bowman, Kenneth O'Conovan, Dianne Yeoman, William Uretsky and Joyce Farris: cited for their outstanding contributions to the successful competion of the revision of the department's manual.

"Many hours and days of exhaustive study were expended" by these officers, one of whom – Joyce Farris – retired last year and is now living in Nevada.

Steve Rana: given the Perry Bower award for excellence in marksmanship. Perry Bower, who made the presentation himself, had sponsored a similar award in Canada, where he served as a police commissioner. He got a chuckle from the assembled officers, their families and friends when he commented that all the officers are "straight shooters, but Officer Rana hit the target!"

Bower began a parade of citizen honorees:

Bill Bates, Carmel's chronicler through his cartoons, was given a certificate of appreciation for his contribution of many hours of time and talent in support of the oficers association efforts to raise funds for D.A.R.E. and Seniors Helping Seniors.

Luke Ingram, 14-year-old Carmelite: a certificate of appreciation "for playing a major role" in the rescue of two swimmers in trouble at Carmel Beach.

Philip John Otis: a certificate of appreciation for his immediate reaction to an attempted burglary in Carmel, which "ensured the apprehension of a felon."

Dean Young: for his prompt acton in applying the Heimlich maneuver to a reataurant patron who was choking.

Rick Minor, an employee of the city's forestry and beach department, who made a financial contribution to the Seniors Helping Seniors program.

Laurie Schumann, Red Cross worker who "began a process of supplying the city with emergency supplies to be used in the event of a disaster." Chief McGilvray added that few people are probably aware of Laurie's support to the city "because of the quiet way she goes about her voluntary efforts."

Sister Jean Williams, principal of the Junipero Serra school, for her enthusiasm for the D.A.R.E. program, and her support for this cooperative effort of police agencies and schools to prevent drug abuse.

Reinforcing the sense of accord between police department and citizens, two city officials then praised the work of the department. Surprisingly, and coincidentally, both City Administrator Doug Schmitz and Mayor Jean Grace turned to poetry to voice that praise. Schmitz, with apologies to "Frost, Yeats and Byron," reworded his son Taylor's favorite poem, "If We Walked On Our Hands," by Beatrice Schenk de Regniers. Some of the references are perhaps "in" jokes, but the spirit will be understood. Here it is:

If the crooks wore the badges and all of you did not
If the bad guys rode in patrol cars and the post office pictures said YOU were sought
What a mixed up place this city would be
What a mixed up, topsy turvy situation it would be

If the shoplifters were known at "401"
...and the Chief was not
If the park kids drove the scooters and instead, the parking officers fought
What a mixed up place this city would be
What a mixed up, topsy turvy situation it would be

If Don Fuselier wore the Scottish kilt and Officer Mel Mukai rode the motor bike
If Cat Dampier worked with Pet as a detective and Bill Uretsky told the Chief to "go take a hike"
What a mixed up place this city would be
What a mixed up, topsy turvy situation it would be

If Valorie didn't take care of our animals and pets
...and Fay Patterson did
If Bob Riddle rode on a fire truck and Terry Chandler was known as "El Cid"
What a mixed up place this city would be
What a mixed up, topsy turvy situation it would be

If all of this happened
what a mess it would be
With all these problems galore and the crooks smiling with glee

So thanks for another year of keeping everything right and keeping your stars shining and our city so bright

Mayor Grace, after paying tribute to the department, commented that we think of it as a public safety department whose work is serious, but she suggested that there are times when we should not take ourselves too seriously. Her poem, with no apologies, was one by Ogden Nash; it was about "practical pranksters."

Chief McGilvray capped the uplifting morning with what he termed "a Scottish wish": "May the best you've ever seen be the worst you'll ever see."

We had just seen the best – of officers and of citizens.

IT WAS another of those special Carmel community occasions. All morning long people came and went, marveling. The wetlands were wet and a park ranger was there, pointing out birds we don't see every day – a great blue heron, an egret, grebes...while he talked, the star of the show – an earthmoving machine (let's call it a sand mover for today), moved slowly back and forth, shifting great piles of sand to one side or the other. It was too slow for some viewers, who had to go back to more mundane activities in shop or office. Too slow also for a parade of children from nearby River School and their teachers. But it had to be done just so, this coming together of river and sea at River Beach.

The county's caterpillar had moved into place about 7 a.m. By 1:30 p.m. the water from the lagoon was moving slowly down the new channel toward the sea. The surf broke from the other direction and met the river water, mixing with it and pushing it back. There was one last rise in the way of success, and a cry came up from the more than 100 people there: "One last push!" "Give it one more!" Obligingly, the caterpillar backed up into the channel and then moved slowly forward, pushing a huge mound of wet sand before it, and ignoring the incoming waves. The river water surged behind it in the channel and then a cheer went up, and applause: for the first time in four years the river had met the sea and was flowing freely into it!

The crowd, quickly satisfied, began to disperse. The TV crews began packing up their gear. Kids and dogs playing in the massive new sand hills were called from their play. Walking back across the sand I heard a couple – visitors? – wondering what it was all about. Well, friends, it was a sign that Jupiter Pluvius had not abandoned us altogether and that things were back the way they ought to be. The rivers flow to the ocean – right? With a little help from man.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

The times are a'changing

AS THE famous Dyland song goes, "The times, they are a'changing." He was referring to the political winds of the 1960s, while I am referring to the weather picture!

As you may recall, my last column provided grim facts and figures on the "worst ever" lack of rainfall and streamflow in the Carmel River. One month later, the situation has dramatically changed. The reservoirs are full and spilling, and the Carmel River has flowed into the Pacific for the first time in four years. We aren't out of the woods yet, but we are getting there!

The purpose of today's column is to provide an update on what's going on along the Carmel River as of March 22. It also gives you a "behind the scenes" picture of how Monterey Peninsula Water Management District staff will answer several important questions that are on everyone's mind...How much streamflow has occurred? Have our aquifers filled up yet? Is rationing going to end soon?

An ususually wet March

The powers-that-be must have been listening to our pleas for rain because this March is already far wetter than normal. Normal rainfall for March at San Clemente Dam is 3.3 inches. To date, we have received about 9.6 inches, resulting in the second wettest March in 70 years. With more storms on the way, March 1991 could challenge March 1983 as the wettest ever!

Rain begets streamflow

Faithful readers who have been subjected to my mini-lessons in hydrology know that rain begets runoff from the steep hillsides in the Carmel River Basin, which in turn results in streamflow. To figure out how much, district staff depend on stream gauges.

Two gauges, one near Carmel Valley Village and one near Via Mallorca Road, are jointly operated by the district and the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS). They have continuous recorders that track the speed of storm flow as it surges downstream. (You can even telephone one gauge and hear a robot-like voice intone the streamflow at the moment!) The gauge actually tells us what the river height is. The river height, in turn, is converted into a flow rate of cubic feet per second (cfs) based on the river geometry at the gauging station.

District field staff also measure flow at other points along the Carmel River, as well as the tributaries that flow into it, with hand-held stream gauging equipment. That means getting into the river, rain or shine.

What comes in must go somewhere

To simplify a bit, streamflow that enters the Carmel River system can go three places – into surface storage (a reservoir), into ground water storage (the Carmel Valley aquifer), or into the ocean via the Carmel River lagoon. Hydrologists like to track where water goes and how much. Since we already know that the reservoirs are full and spilling, let's concentrate on aquifer storage.

How do we determine how much aquifer storage resulted from our 9.6 inches of rain? This is an important question because the aquifers can store much more water than our relatively small reservoirs. The lower Carmel Valley aquifer is our primary drought reserve and our main source of supply. Thus, the aquifer storage is a key factor in determining whether to reduce or end rationing.

First, we have to figure out the volume (acre-feet) of water that entered the system. The stream gauges only give us part of the story (the flow rate). Fortunately, we can convert cfs into acre-feet by using a simple factor: 1 cfs for 24 hours is equivalent to 2 acre-feet per day. Thus, if the river flows steadily at 100 cfs, we know that 200 acre-feet came into the system that day. (Recall that an acre-foot is about 325,000 gallons.)

Ah, if only it were that simple. Wintertime river flow is often erratic and may respond to rainshowers in pulses. Thus, the flow rate may vary extensively over the course of a day. Thus, district staff must calculate the average flow for the day based on numerous individual measurements.

Limited recharge

Once we know how much water came into the system, how do we determine the amount that percolates into our aquifer? Even though the aquifer is far from full, it can only receive about 200 acre-feet per day through the riverbed. No matter how much water is flowing by, the recharge (percolation rate), is limited by the physical characteristics of the aquifer. The streamflow that can't be recharged continues out to sea.

The lower Carmel Valley aquifer needs almost 10,000 acre-feet to completely fill to its 22,000-acre-foot capacity. At a rate of 200 acre-feet per day, we need steady river flow for several weeks in order to fill it up. One big storm won't do the job; it would just mean a lot of water to the ocean. Instead, we hope for a continuing series of storms through April to keep the river flowing at a moderate level to the sea.

Direct measurement

Another way to track aquifer storage is to directly measure the ground water level at a series of monitor wells. The wells are placed along the Carmel River and also away from the river to get a more complete "picture" of aquifer storage. Staff lowers a probe into the well on a long color-coded wire which acts as a measuring tape. The probe "beeps" when it hits water, and the water depth is determined by reading the color-coded markings on the wire.

Our measurements have shown that the aquifer doesn't fill up evenly like a bathtub. Instead, water levels rise sharply just under the river, then slowly spread outward to the farthest reaches of the aquifer. District staff track this phenomenon over time by taking numerous measurements at the monitor wells throughout the Valley.

Will rationing end?

So, will rationing end? That's really up to Mother Nature and the district board. The Phase III ordinance now in place states that mandatory 20 percent rationing would end only if two things happen: the aquifers are filled and the river flows for 14 consecutive days into the sea. It looks like we'll get the 14 days of flow before we get the full aquifer. Thus, the board may defer its decision on mandatory rationing until its April 22 meeting. Stay tuned!

We need you.

Eggstra, Eggstra!

THE SEASONS are slightly out of whack this year. Spring came in February and winter showed up in March, but Easter doesn't care. Rain or shine, Easter is just around the corner. So don't forget to buy an extra dozen eggs this week. The bunny will be here on Sunday, ready or not.

FABREGE EGGS

Decorating eggs can be complicated if you have a budding artist in your family. I can imagine the mother of young Fabrege saying to her son as she puts the freshly boiled eggs out to cool, "What do you mean, you want to use gold leaf and pearls? On an Easter egg? You know I'll make egg salad out of it in a week!"

Fabrege, official jeweler to the court of the Russian czars, designed Easter eggs for the Imperial family from 1886 to 1916. He created eggs from precious jewels and gold for czars Alexander III and his son, Nicholas II which are now valued in the millions.

Kyra Petrovskaya Wayne recently conducted a lecture and slide presentation on the "Fabulous Fabrege Eggs" during a Russian Easter celebration at La Mirada, the adjunct to the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Friends of La Mirada committee members Mrs. John McSorley, Mrs. Luther Wallace, Mrs. John Totten, Mrs. Hunter Bungay, Mrs. Luther Wallace and Mrs. Wallace Holm attended to every detail including balalaika music and authentic Russian hors d'oeuvres. Rosemary Poskus' handpainted papier mache eggs decorated La Mirada as the finishing touch.

ADULTS ONLY

Kids, here's a chance to get your parents out of the house next Saturday. Carmel Middle School students have been busy this week boiling and dying dozens of eggs for the Forest Theater Guild's "Old-Fashioned Adult Easter Egg Hunt" scheduled for Saturday, March 30 at Los Laureles Lodge.

Lucky adults can fill their Easter baskets with eggs redeemable for gift certificates to local restaurants, theater tickets and hotel accommodations. They can take carriage rides, enter the best decorated hat contest, and watch Sam and Edie Karas perform a preview scene from The Last of the Red Hot Lovers, which is scheduled to open April 5 at the Cherry Foundation Theater in Carmel.

To reserve tickets for your mom and dad, call Los Laureles Lodge at 659-2233.

SEA LEGS

The Monterey County Symphony Guild fashion show, "Anything Goes," had a nautical theme this year.

"I have to get some air!" The pre-function area outside the Hyatt Regency Ballroom comfortably holds about 250 for pre-event cocktails but on "Anything Goes" Thursday the long hall felt like steerage on a tramp steamer bound for Macao as 650 women and a few brave men jostled one another for an hour waiting for the doors to open.

Lee Chamberlain clung to a barrel/cocktail table with both hands as the ever-compressing crowd of elegantly dressed women surged around her. Norma Jean Hodges gracefully stepped out of someone's way and overturned a bus tray loaded to the gills with empty glasses. Everyone tried to be polite but it wasn't easy.

Usually management will ask people to wait before they're seated with the hope they'll buy a few drinks. In this case, the bar was accessible to just a few and the rest had to concentrate on remaining composed in a tight situation. What was the reason for the delay in opening the doors? What if someone had panicked?

Once inside, the ladies breathed a sigh of relief, sipped a glass of wine to calm jangled nerves and enjoyed an afternoon of high fashion fun, applauding theatrical outfits that ran the gamut from H.M.S. Pinafore to Annie Get Your Gun.

Guild President Dolores Gunia and her board members wore glitzy nautical costumes someone said were $1,000 Bob Mackie creations. Dolores laughed and said her outfit was a Gunia original, totally recycled, with epaulets made of shoulder pads salvaged from an outdated sweater. Dolores' creative skills are not limited to fashion. She was also responsible for the shipboard set design stage that launched the models down the ramp.

THEY CAME from far and near to see "Anything Goes" (left to right): Mary Vross from Palm Springs joined Barbara Shanks of Pacific Grove, Carmelite Marge Cramer and Mabel Turner who has homes in Stockton and Pacific Grove for an afternoon of fun and fashions. Some thought the clothes were more appropriate for a floating crap game than a trip to the grocery store and the sight of Vel Garrihy in black-fringed chaps with gold beads, a cowboy hat, and silver belt buckle brought back memories of favorite costumes.

One woman described her mother's cocktail dress with the yellow ostrich feather boa. "Mom called it her 'Big Bird' dress after the Sesame Street character and the grandchildren loved it," she said.

"When I worked for IBM in New York in the '50s, I knew an Irish woman in the fur trade," Honorary Guild Advisory Board member Ruth Amonette recalled. "One day my furrier friend called me and said she had a new piece that would be perfect for me. It was something called a stole. She showed me how I could dress up a business suit or a black cocktail dress with the length of fur and I bought it. I think I was the first woman on Fifth Avenue to wear a stole."

Meanwhile Monterey County Symphony President K. Amonette applauded each and every model as they smiled down at him from the ramp.

GARCON!

The "Red Cross Benefit Dinner featuring Celebrity Servers" at the Sardine Factory is always a big hit, especially with the VIP waiters. They wear personalized aprons and are assisted by Sardine Factory regulars.

Repeat server state Sen. Henry Mello's tableside manner is so slick Ted Balestreri, in his opening remarks quipped, "Henry has worked this event for us so many times that in one more year, he'll have enough aprons to open his own restaurant."

This year's servers included Sen. Mello, Supervisor Marc Del Piero, Mayor Dan Albert and Richard LeBlanc of the American Red Cross, who stood in for Rep. Leon Panetta.

NOTES ON THE MARGIN

NIMBY is the term used by professional land use consultants to describe the person who moves to a community and then wants to shut the door on everyone else. NIMBY — Not In My Backyard.

At a recent event held on the peninsula a member of the clergy outdid the chamber of commerce and put us at heaven's doorstep when he referred to the Monterey Peninsula as "the vestibule of heaven." Who can blame local NIMBYs for wanting to latch the gate on growth with such sacred ground underfoot?

IF you haven't gotten by the Cherry Foundation to see the Edna Bullock, Ken Weise exhibition, don't wait. March 30 is the last day.

"SCIENCE teachers have been told about science. They haven't done science," says Steven Webster, director of education at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. How do you tell a student how to dissect a frog if you've never done it yourself?

Teachers will have a chance for hands-on experience through the Wet Science Project, a $500,000 teacher-training program to help school districts improve the way they teach science. Funded by the National Science Foundation and the Monterey Bay Aquarium, the Wet Science Project will focus on school districts in Monterey, Santa Cruz, Santa Clara and San Benito counties.

VISITORS to La Mirada are often told the story of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton and how they stayed at the then Frank Work house while they filmed The Sandpiper in Big Sur. Today docents point out Liz and Dick; tiny figures painted into the mural in the La Mirada dining room. A fact about the famous lovers not found in the approved docent handbook: after Taylor and Burton left La Mirada, Work had to order a new bed.

CHEF OF THE YEAR

The Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Culinary Federation sets precedents with their annual "Chef of the Year" arwards dinner. Ask Carmel Russo and her husband Anthony. They've been coming to these dinners for over 20 years and will tell you about the time each table had its own hula dancer or the year the hot lambada dancers raised everybody's temperature.

This year's theme was the Academy Awards. Two autograph-hungry, bubble gum-chewing teenagers, Trixie Starr and Bernice Schmidlapp, screeched as they discovered luminaries such as Sly Stallone, Ed Meese and Ronald Coleman in the group of local chefs and their guests. Carmel Mayor Jean Grace was mistaken for Sandra Dee by the star-struck duo.

ACF President Julio Ramirez presented 1990 Chef of the Year David Tyler with two trophies and last year's honoree, Beat Giger, bestowed the official medallion. Tyler, who is Corporate Chef and Food and Beverage Manager at Casa Munras, was honored for his culinary skills, community involvement and the work he has done to promote the image of the American Culinary Federation.

The diminutive Tyler traced his culinary roots back to his grandmother. "They say I got my start as a child standing on a five-gallon bucket stirring spaghetti sauce in my grandmother's kitchen. It's all true, in fact, I still stand on a bucket to stir the sauce."

MONTEREY PENINSULA Jaycees held their 33rd annual Distinguished Service Awards dinner dance Friday, March 22. THE FIRST MURPHY

625-0566 Enid Sales, Chairperson

Ground-breaking event

GROUND-BREAKING FOR the restoration of the First Murphy is scheduled for Monday, April l! Everyone is invited to join us to celebrate the commencement of this exciting project!

At 12:15 p.m. on Monday, the First Murphy Committee, public officials, Murphy family descendants, residents, supporters, a barbership quartet, a clown, and numerous construction workers will kick off the restoration of the cottage to its original character. Free refreshments will be served, and a good time will be had by all.

Old hands who followed the Great Move of the cottage by crane and flat-bed truck will certainly want to attend this next big step in the rebirth of the First Murphy. Newcomers are welcome!! Rain or shine, the ground-breaking will go on!

The First Murphy cottage has been resting on cribbing at its new home on Lincoln north of Sixth since its Great Move from Mission Street last year. The First Murphy Committee, a group of dedicated volunteers, have been hard at work putting together the plans and funds for the restoration.

The wonderful benefit fashion show presented by Saks Fifth Avenue Carmel earlier this month, generously contributed by Gerry Naditz, manager of Saks, assisted considerably with the fund-raising effort. Donated funds now total over $28,000, according to Jim Gregg, fund-raising chairman.

In-kind donations are being steadily offered. Past donors include Portable Site Service and Howard Carter & Associates: Portable Site Service (Castroville) donated six months' free use of the cyclone fence protecting the cottage; Howard Carter and Associates (Monterey) have donated the structural engineering critical to the start of the restoration.

M.J. Murphy Lumber and Hardware – yes, started by the builder himself 75 years ago, and still owned by the Murphy family – has steadily contributed construction supplies and other valuable assistance.

New donors are set to start work the week of April 1. Edward Riddell, Ed Mayfield, and Bill Swift are volunteering their general-contracting skills to oversee the project. Jim Kane will donate his carpentry skills. Robin Way and Kent Ciucci will contribute carpentry work to the initial phase.

Chris Dinner will contribute the heating and sheet metal planning and installation.

Mike Cate of Cate Electric is generously donating electrical work. Thanks are also due to Mike Sample of Advanced Automatic Sprinkler which will contribute all the work and wiring for the fire sprinkler system.

Granite Rock is donating foundation materials; Joseph DeMaria and Sons are donating their skills as master masons to construct the foundation and chimney. A & R Plumbing are contributing lumbing work. More donations of local expertise and supplies will be listed in our next column.

The entire effort will be documented by volunteer Paul Buczkowski, professional videographer. The film will memorialize the outstanding physical effort of the restoration, performed primarily by volunteers, from the goundbreaking through the scheduled December completion. The Great Move is already on tape; the restoration will be recorded on film as the next stage in the rebirth of the First Murphy.

Enid Sales, general contractor and First Murphy project director, encourages interested persons to contact her at 625-0566, to discuss how they can help by volunteering.

Carpenters are very much needed; carpentry is critical to each short phase of construction, but no individual carpenter needs to make long-term commitments. There has been a surprising lack of volunteer carpenters, although other trades are giving liberally.

The exterior work is scheduled for completion in December, and there are many opportunities for short-term donations of assistance during the scheduled phases of construction.

Once restored, the 1902 First Murphy House, the first building constructed by Carmel master builder M.J. Murphy, will become a casual gathering place for the community. The city is donating the landscaping of the surrounding land for the First Murphy Park. The open-handed support and wonderful spirit of Carmel has made this remarkable project a reality.

FOOTBALL FOUNDATION NAMES LOCAL SCHOLAR-ATHLETES

Recognized for their skill in the classroom and on the football field, 13 high school senior boys from Monterey and San Benito counties – including one each from Carmel High and Robert Louis Stevenson – have been named recipients of scholarships as awarded by the local chapter of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

The Monterey County Chapter's scholar/athlete program annually awards a $1,000 scholarship to one qualified individual from each of the 13 high schools in the two counties who has maintained a minimum 3.2 grade point average (GPA), demonstrated school and community leadership and displayed outstanding skill on the football field.

Carmel's honoree is Steve Watts, who maintained a 3.43 GPA and served as team captain for the Padres' 1990 football team while he played cornerback, safety and wide receiver. RLS' recipient is Joe Kim, 3.36 GPA, who played offensive halfback and defensive cornerback.

Watts, 18, is the son of Jeff and Nancy Watts of Carmel Valley; Kim, 17, is the son of Jacob and Mija Kim of Wichita, Kansas. Watts' top two college preferences are St. Mary's University and the University of San Diego, while Kim is eyeing Air Force and the U.S. Military Academy.

The chapter, comprised of an all-volunteer board, will present the scholar/athletes with the scholarships and commemorative plaques at its annual awards banquet, which will be held Friday, April 12 at the Hyatt Regency Monterey. Tickets are $35 per person and the event is open to the public.

"We're very proud to say that this year's group of 13 scholar/athletes possess an average GPA of 3.62," Norm Chetlin, chapter president, said. "This is a banner crop of young men who applied their intelligence and dilligence in all the area that we consider."

In addition to Watts and Kim, this year's Monterey and San Benito county recepients, their schools and their GPA's are listed alphabetically as follows: Efren Arellano, Alisal High, 3.38; Ryan Bravo, King City High, 3.30; Pedro L. Flores, Seaside High, 3.86; Dennis Gansen, San Benito County High, 4.25; Dirk Giannini, Palma High, 3.52; Kris Poma, Monterey High, 3.39; Juan Sandoval, Gonzales High, 3.97; James Scariot, North Salinas High, 3.587; James Siebe, Pacific Grove High, 3.22; Brian D. Thure, Salinas High, 4.16.

SEAL PUPPING SEASON ARRIVES IN PEBBLE BEACH

On March 18, Pebble Beach Co. crews began installation of temporary fencing and signage at Cypress Point and Fanshell Beach to protect harbor seal pupping areas. Local harbor seals give birth to their pups along this one-mile section of 17-Mile Drive coastline each year between mid-March and Mid-May. The program was initiated by Pebble Beach Co. in 1989.

Cypress Point turnaround will be closed to cars and tour busses and accessible by foot only. For the sixth year, Seal Watch docents will be available after the first pup is observed, to assist in public education and protection of the seals. Over 80 volunteers rotate two-hour shifts 12 hours each day during the pupping season.

The SPCA will also monitor the beaches to encourage the safety of the seal pups. Last year 105 seals were born on the two beaches, a rise of 15 percent over the previous year.

Spectators are encouraged to view the pinipeds but are asked to follow the signage, stay off fences and keep their voices lowered. If frightened, the mothers may abandon their pups in an attempt to escape from noise or people entering the area. Once a pup has had human contact, it is shunned by other seals.

Persons observing an abandoned pup are requested not to touch the pup but inform the SPCA at 373-2631 or Pebble Beach Co. Security Office at 624-6669.

Record breaker

LAUREN SURDI of Carmel Valley, a fifth-grader at San Benancio School, set a national record in the 100-yard backstroke in the 9-10-year-old division at a swim meet held at Clovis West High School in Fresno. Surdi, who swims for the Salinas Valley Aqautics Club, clocked a 1:04.13, shattering the previous mark of 1:05.12, which has stood since 1985. Surdi, who has been swimming competitively since she was 8, said she had a feeling she would do well that morning: "I told my mom in the morning that today would be the day," she told a newspaper reporter. Surdi also set a new Pacific Swimming Record in the 50-yard backstroke with a 29.96 clocking. More than 600 swimmers and 62 clubs participated in the event. (Clay Peterson photo.)

FREE TALK ON DISCIPLINE SET FOR APRIL 13

Dr. Tom Bishop will give a free public talk on "Fundamentals of Discipline." This is the 12th series of lectures on understanding the family and its impact on the development of children.

Bishop will discuss the fundamental steps to all discipline situations, the "dos" and "don'ts" of discipline, especially difficult discipline problems, and the child's problem behavior as a distress signal. He will describe the differences between abuse and discipline. He will also discuss the discipline issues and the single parent, and conflicts between siblings.

This talk will be presented on Wednesday, April 3, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Crossroads Room on the second floor at the rear of Carmel Crossroads Shopping Mall. Call 624-8110 for more information.

ROTARY CLUBS SPONSOR COUNTYWIDE "CARE ENOUGH TO SHARE" FOOD DRIVE

As requests for emergency food in Monterey County continue to pour in, area residents will be given an opportunity to offer much-needed assistance during a food drive planned for the first week in April.

"Care Enough to Share," a program sponsored by the 16 Rotary Clubs of Monterey County, will be held April 2-7 as part of a countywide effort to stock the Food Bank with non-perishable items to help meet an overwhelming need for emergency food.

"Car Enough to Share" grocery bags will be inserted in the Tuesday, April 2 edition of The Herald and in the Wednesday, April 3 editions of the King City Rustler, Gonzales Tribune and Soledad Bee. In addition to the four newspapers, "Care Enough to Share" grocery bags will be available through any one of the county's 16 Rotary Clubs and the Food Bank of Monterey County.

The grocery bags specify the types of non-perishable foods needed and the various drop-off points.

According to Richard Flaig, project chairman, all of the grocery bags should be filled and delivered to the nearest fire station or any one of the other several drop-off points no later than Sunday, April 7.

"This truly is a countywide effort," Flaig, president of the Monterey Sunrise Rotary Club, said. "We have the tremendous cooperation of all the fire departments and many other individuals and organizations throughout Monterey County."

Although this type of project has succeeded in other parts of the country, Flaig said this is the first time it has been attempted in Monterey County.

"We're very confident the people of Monterey County will rise to the occasion and help the more than 32,000 people who need some sort of emergency or supplemental food assistance each month," Flaig said.

The Food Bank for Monterey County, a project of the Alliance on Aging, provides emergency food to more than 40 emergency food pantries, soup kitchens and homeless shelters that provide direct assistance to individuals and families in crisis situations.

"Hunger is a year-round problem," Neil Thompson, director for Food Bank of Monterey County, said. "Hunger takes on a lot of different perspectives as well. For example, we have single parents who, even with a job, are forced to make a choice each month between paying the rent or buying food. Needless to say, most opt for shelter."

The "Care Enough to Share" food drive is sponsored by the Rotary Clubs of Monterey County, all local fire departments, Nob Hill Foods, The Herald, Casey Printing, KSBW-TV and KWAV-FM.

Additional information or questions about the project can be directed to the Food Bank of Monterey County at 408/758-1523 or 408/372-7843.

TRAVEL

By Ray A. March

Looking ahead

SOME THINGS seem to be getting behind us; even if it's only an illusion: the Persian Gulf war and the drought, for instance.

Looking ahead there are some inevitables like Easter vacation, summer vacation and weekend breaks. In spite of our concerns for safe flight, we know we have to get away and eventually we will.

Spring is that annual rolling around of the seasons when we incur momentary brain-lapse, when the body, against all medical logic wants sun or something. Whatever, as travelers we need to be somewhere else.

It will be time before many people will do anything too exotic with their travel plans besides daydream, so let's get practical! Think Southern California.

That's not all too ridiculous. If there are children in the family, chances are a typical vacation – at some time in one's life – will include Southern California because that's where Disneyland, Magic Mountain and Knotts Berry Farm are located. There is no escaping this geographical quirk.

Now wait, this is not another guide to the best amusement rides, although we hear the new roller coaster at Magic Mountain is incredibly scary. In fact, what we think of as the Greater Los Angeles area seems to us to be the center of disorder. The San Diego Freeway doesn't really go to San Diego, Anaheim is not a suburb and the Los Angeles Rams don't play football in their hometown.

Which, when it all runs together, doesn't make sense. So, go to Disneyland; it's there and can't be avoided. Consider it a family duty, but believe it or not; there are some attractions in Greater L.A. that make the effort of sorting it all out worthwhile.

Here's what to see after you've seen Mickey Mouse:

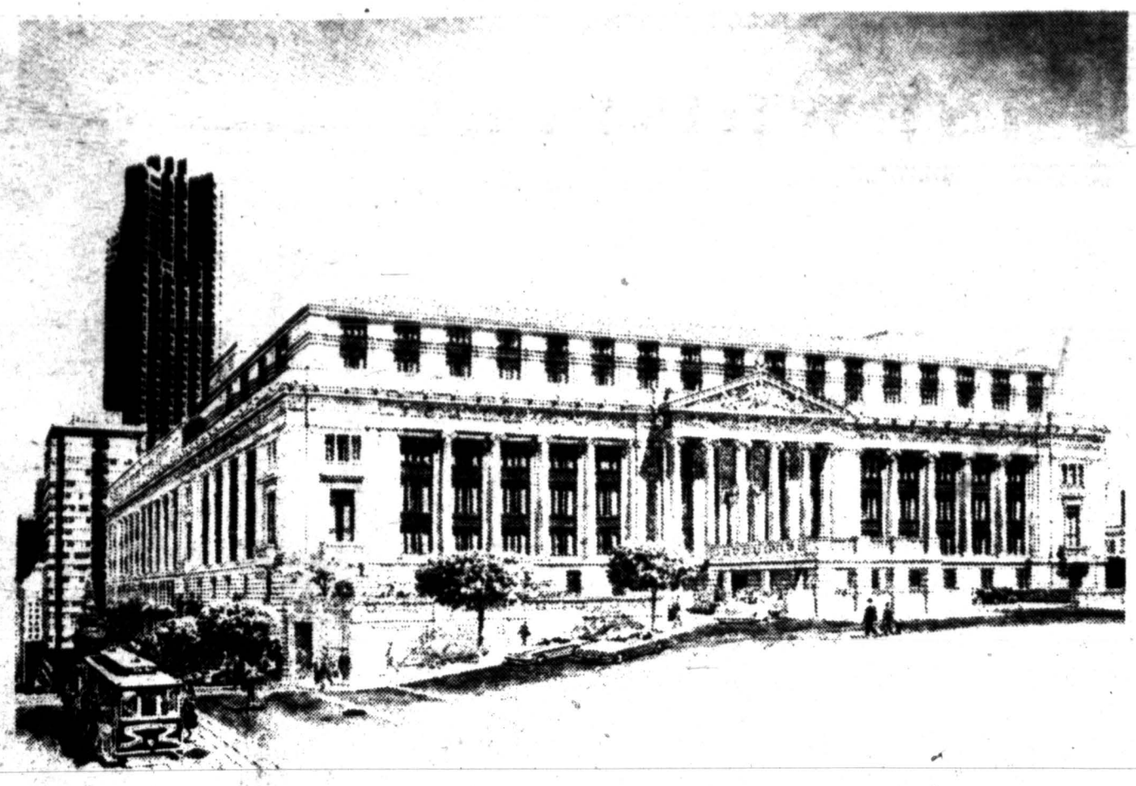
Tip One: A way to cut costs while traveling to Disneyland with children is to stay at the Pan Pacific (formerly the Emerald of Anaheim). Teenagers packing MacBurgers up the elevator are a strong hint that this hotel is ideal for the family. The Pan Pacific is next door to the Disneyland Hotel with all its sights and sounds; just walk over for an evening's entertainment.

Tip Two: Take an adult break and ride Amtrak 33 minutes south to San Juan Capistrano and visit the mission. So, it's a train. Take the kids, too. The Amtrak ride from Anaheim is a calming relief from the pace of thrill rides and freeways, which can be one and the same. While there, check out the adobe tour. Monterey isn't the only town with adobes.

Tip Three: Six miles out of LAX, in Redondo Beach, is a super getaway hotel called Portofino Inn. Completely redone after the January 1988 storm that nearly took it to sea, the Portofino is casual plush and intimate. Rooms are Pacific side or overlooking the yacht harbor. Business travelers will like the rates and two-line telephones for laptop or fax. Of course, the kids can find a use for them, too.

Tip Four: If you must go to Hollywood, stop by the Roosevelt Hotel for the flavor of the early Oscar dinner nights and the wonderful lobby decor. And, there's an original David Hockney in the swimming pool. See for yourself! Not even the Contemporary Museum in Honolulu, with its comprehensive collection of Hockney's works, can match this unusual piece of art. After the Roosevelt stop, dine or wine at Yamashiro's up the hill. The view is a bonus.

Tip Five: So you don't have a horse and you can't stand Westerns. We've got news for you.



SAN FRANCISCO'S Ritz-Carlton will open its doors to guests on April 8 after a three-and-a-half-year renovation of a historical building atop Nob Hill. The hotel, which features the city's only outdoor restaurant, will be the 20th in the Ritz-Carlton chain.

You're going to love the Gene Autry Western Museum. It's adjacent to the L.A. Zoo and should be mandatory for everyone to visit. Collections range from original Remington and Russell paintings to (yes), the saga of the Western movie. The museum is less about Autry and more about our Western culture.

Let's admit it. Visiting Greater Los Angeles can be a rewarding family experience. A map and a sense of direction are useful, but don't go without a sense of adventure. The kids will love it.

HEADING NORTH now, to familiar grounds.

San Francisco's hotel and restaurant scene is getting a new lift. The inventory of the city's hotel rooms has increased 26 percent since 1986 and the room count now is expected to rise to 29,610 by mid-year. How they get that last 10 rooms we'll never know. How many beds is that?

Two new properties ready to open are the Sheraton Palace and the Ritz-Carlton. Everyone is curious to see what the Sheraton has done in preserving the old Garden Court and its stained-glass skylight, but what about the Ritz-Carlton?

The 336-room Ritz, scheduled to open April 8, is on the Nob Hill site of the former Pacific Coast headquarters of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. Most recently it was campus to Cogswell College.

While much of the three-and-a-half-year renovation is an extension of the building's 1920s design theme, the interior attractions are ultra-modern. There are two restaurants (one that offers the city's only hotel outdoor dining), two lounges, a fitness center with indoor swimming pool, whirlpool and separate steam, sauna and massage for men and womem, three retail stores and 23,000 square feet of meeting space.

Ritz regulars will be comforted to know that the hotel chain will continue its tradition of exhibiting 18th and 19th century art. The new Ritz is number 20 in the chain, and there is every preliminary indication that it will easily match the Nob Hill tradition of grand hotels. For reservation information call (415) 296-7465 or (800) 241-3333.

While on the subject of San Francisco hotels, the Galleria Park is offering a "Spring Fling Shoppers" rate of $99 Friday through Sunday and $109 Monday through Thursday from April 12 through June 9. The Galleria Park is 177 rooms, art deco in design and includes in its amenities package a roof-top park and jogging track. Of course, shopping is just steps away at Union Square and Maiden Lane.

Locally, there's a bonus in the bulk mail. Area residents and "established guests" may have seen the Quail Lodge enticement offering its extraordinary accommodations at half-price until June 30.

The super reduction is in celebration of Quail Lodge's 15th-straight Mobil Five-Star Award and there is an important condition: The rate is available only to former guests and reference must be made to the bulk mailing card that hit the post offices last week. A strange way to market a quality resort, but who's to argue with success?

In the 3rd century B.C., the courtiers of the royal court in China were required to carry doves in their mouths in order to sweeten their breath when addressing the emperor.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Love is sharing

From the March 31, 1983
Carmel Pine Cone

A few months ago I was working at the church in Salinas. I listened to Phil Donahue's television talk show (I don't have a TV at home). Donahue hosted a group of irate women who complained that their husbands came home from work, had a beer, ate dinner in silence, then with a couple of more beers they stretched out on a Easy-Boy recliner and watched TV until they fell asleep.

They said that weekends were worse and that their marriages were dying on the vine for lack of communication and sheer boredom. They stated that they could have thrown a few beer cans, yelled and hollered, but that they did none of these things.

They organized a union and went "on strike for love." They said that to accept this situation with a passive or docile manner only made things worse. Which reminds me of the reply of an Indian doctor in Bombay when asked how to curb his country's growing birth rate: "Give every husband a color TV."

When either spouse suffers a real or imaginary injustice in silence, a boiling cauldron of anger and resentment grows until in explodes like Mt. St. Helena's.

Now here is Dr. Farrell's yearly advice to the married and lovelorn. In my two decades in Rotary I modestly consider that I have become a world's authority on the subject. True communication and the expression of mutual love is neither passive nor is it aggressive, but rather it is a sensitive and considerate sharing.

Passive behavior is based on fear and is doomed to a milk-toast defeat. Aggressive behavior is based on anger and frustration and brings about massive retaliation. Mutual respect is what love is all about. It means that the husband and the wife feel good about each other and that feeling flows over to their neighbors.

As the Anglican Padre says, "Here endeth the first lesson." However, next year I expect a miraculous report telling me that my advice has been heeded. I do not anticipate a notice of a funeral or a murder. Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Millions of Americans have a stake in company pension funds. The U.S. Labor Department is responsible for policing the funds, but it is an enormous task. There are 900,000 private pension funds, and their assets total $1.7 trillion. The Labor Department has only 300 pension examiners to keep watch on how the funds are operated. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole wants to add 100 more examiners, and she also wants to make it easier for individuals to resolve pension disputes. She has proposed simplifying the process of filing lawsuits over pension rights. The process is now so complicated and costly that many claimants don't take legal action to pursue their claims.

At age 87, retired corporate executive Jack Katz went back to work — this time as official lunchtime greeter at a popular Atlanta restaurant. Katz was invited to take the job because, after 40 years as an Atlanta businessman, "he knows everybody. He's the mayor of midtown," a restaurant spokesman said. Katz said his wife of 68 years told him to take the job because "she doesn't want me hanging around the house." But she demurs: "He loves meeting people. That's how he gets his energy."

Playwright takes the stage with sword, grail and chutzpah

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THANE CHRISTOPHER might be described as a restless soul.

"I like to travel. It's strange; if I've been in a place more than six months, I feel very edgy. It's such a huge, huge world we live in," he observes.

Claiming he has "nothing to tie me down, really," Christopher takes to the road, when the spirit moves. And sometimes he settles locally long enough to build theater sets or undertake freelance computer projects, the latter an occupation he finds "boring."

Not boring is his latest creative effort, the staging of an original one-man show. Kevin Costner-like, Christopher is the producer, director and star of Perceval, the Holy Fool and the Quest for the Holy Grail. It plays Thursday and Friday, March 28-29, at Portofino Cafe in Pacific Grove.

"Perceval, the Holy Fool is a condensation of a number of tales, myths and legends into an interpretation of one man's quest for the source of life," he explains.

The play is staged under the aegis of peninsula-based Unicorn Theatre Presents, as well as Christopher's own company, Pendragon Productions. Show time is 8 both nights at the cafe, located downstairs in the Pacific Grove Plaza, 620 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. Tickets are $5.

Being half-English, Christopher says he discovered early a fascination for British literature. He spent a number of years working and studying in Britain.

"I love those stories, the ones I studied in England. I studied classical history and literature in Canterbury, and there I got heavily into Arthurian legend."

Like a knight of old, Christopher went in search of the holy grail, or at least the origins of the tales that surround it.

"I looked back to their source in North Wales," he says. "The Tale of Perceval is an ancient one. Its roots stem back to the 13th century Welsh 'Mabinogion,' or 'Stories of Our Beginnings.' The story of the grail, to which Perceval is linked, is equally as old, finding its first written sources in the French romances of Chretien de Troyes."

These centuries-old tales, Christopher maintains, "are immediate to me."

"I don't like modern plays on the whole. I don't relate to their themes," he adds. "I feel the same way about films. With film, you can make things that people only dream of. That's exactly what I want to do."

Christopher possesses the training to accomplish his goals. He studied film at both New York University and the University of Southern California. He has worked as a journalist and actor in London.

He has composed numerous screenplays and begun novels, but Perceval, The Holy Fool is his first theater piece. It will be staged simply, the only props being sword and grail.

"Most theater here seems to stick with a known commodity. A lot of it is fairly recent, controversial stuff. Me – I would like to see something that takes a risk," he says.

Last summer Christopher worked as a technical intern at Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater. He made a video documentary of the student show, a touring production of Noah's Ark.

"I work a lot with Carey Crockett," he explains. "I see and build a lot of set designs with Carey. I would consider myself an actor and a writer. So much of the time there are no plays around that I would want to act in, so I wrote a play that I would."

Christopher said he hopes to book his play at various peninsula venues, possibly Tor House and Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

"I like doing a one-man play," he says of Perceval, the Holy Fool. "I'm responsible if it goes down in flames. That means I'm either acting very porly, or the script is weak or my directing. But I am taking the risk."

THANE CHRISTOPHER will stage his original one-man production, Perceval the Holy Fool and the Quest for the Holy Grail. It plays at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, March 28-29, at Portofino Cafe in downtown Pacific Grove. For reservations, call 373-7379.

Peninsula restaurants prepare festive Easter feasts

Monterey Peninsula area restaurants have scheduled sumptuous Easter Sunday brunches, buffets and dinners for those wishing to dine out on that holiday, March 31st.

Seated amid stately pines just a short, leisurely drive down the coast from Carmel is the award-winning Highlands Inn and its Pacific's Edge Restaurant with chef extraordinaire Brian Whitmer at the helm. A spectacular Easter brunch is scheduled March 31 that should match the spectacular views. Served from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., at $24 per person ($12 for children under 12), it has become an Easter tradition for many local residents.

The popularity of Pacific Edge's prix fixe menus has inspired Brian to prepare a superb dinner for Easter: Orzo Pasta "Risotto" with Grilled Asparagus and Spring Morels, Smoked Salmon with Grilled Vidalia Onions, Loin of Veal with Fricasse of New Potatoes and Artichokes, topped off with Crispy Cocoa Raspberry Purses with Vanilla Bean Ice Cream. Cost is $35 per person or $55 per person including selected wines per course.

For reservations call 624-3801.

At the other end of the peninsula, live piano music, an Easter egg hunt and a children's petting zoo highlight the offerings at Doubletree Hotel in Monterey.

An Easter buffet menu will be served from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Doubletree's Atrium Lobby and will feature a variety of delectables:

Six different salads range from Monterey Bay Calamari Salad to the classic Waldorf and a Spicy Mexican Salad; appetizers include seafood and vegetable canapes, imported and domestic cheeses, lox with cucumber relish and rye bread, pates and terrines; omelettes and eggs cooked to order, fruit crepes, corned beef hash, bacon and breakfast sausage, and Lyonaise potatoes; carving station items range from Minted Roast Leg of Lamb, Steamship of Beef with Mustard and Horseradish and Honey-Glazed Baked Ham; entrees include Chicken Oriental, Grilled Swordfish with Tomatoes, Herbs and Garlic Cream, and Petite Filet with Forest Mushrooms. Desserts feature an array of pastries, cakes, pies and mousses.

All that for $19.95 for adults, $17.95 seniors, $7.95 children under 12 and free for the kiddies 5 and under.

Reservations are suggested; call 649-4511.

Surdi's at 2030 N. Fremont Street in Monterey is well known for its Italian delicacies, but they've also got a mouth-watering menu scheduled for Easter Sunday.

For starters try one of their specialty drinks, whether it's a frothy strawberry daiquiri or a glass of champagne. "The Great Monterey Seafood Buffet," as they have so dubbed it, begins with an Antipasto Salad and Fruit Bar; fresh Ranch Eggs Scrambled with Cheddar Cheese; Baked Ham with Honey-Brown Sugar Glaze; Crab and Shrimp-Stuffed Flounder; Specially Seasoned and Fried Monterey Bay Calamari; Pasta Pescatore with Clams, Snapper, Crab and Bay Shrimp; Deep-Fried Shrimp with Tartar or Cocktail Sauce; Veal and Bell Peppers; Tortellini Baked in a Creamy Alfredo Sauce with Ham and Mushrooms; Italian Green Beans Sauteed with Fresh Garlic; Pizza by the Slice, topped off with a fresh fruit and dessert buffet, all at only $12.95 per person, children under 12, $4.95, and kids 5 under, free.

Other specials for Easter include Eggs Princess; Eggs Benedict; The Godfather (scrambled eggs on a bed of mild Italian sausage, melted cheddar cheese and potatoes); Scrambled Eggs and Bacon; Eggs Artichoke; Italian Sausage and Scrambled Eggs; and Surdi's Special: a golden-brown sandwich of two thick slices of French toast filled with melted mozzarella cheese, served with mild Italian sausage and maple syrup.

For reservations call 646-0100.

Carmel's Rancho Canada is famous for its golfing and Friday night buffet, but Easter Sunday they'll be rolling out the red carpet for a splendid Easter Brunch from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Menu items include Eggs Benedict; bacon and sausage; potatoes; a full omelette bar; a Belgian Waffle bar with fruit toppings and syrup; a salad bar; 10 different salads; imported and domestic cheeses; cold cuts; roast leg of lamb, baron of beef and chicken; fresh vegetables; Easter pastries and desserts, all for $16.75 per person.

Reservations are suggested: 624-0111. Rancho Canada is located one-half from Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road.

For an exotic treat, try Monterey's Siamese Bay Restaurant for Easter. They've come up with a unique Easter Sunday buffet that includes:

Baked Ham; Sushi; Roast Turkey; Asparagus Garlic with Mushrooms; French bread, fried rice; sweet potatoes; pumpkin and mango pies; and a full salad bar. The special buffet, from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. is all you can eat and is $11.95 for adults and $5.95 for kids 3 and older. There's also free colored Easter eggs for the kiddies.

For more information or to make reservations, call 373-1550. Siamese Bay is located at 131 Webster St. behind the Monterey Post Office.

One of the most spectacular views of any restaurant on the peninsula can be found at Kiewel's Cafe & Catering located at the edge of Heritage Harbor with expansive views of Fisherman's Wharf and Monterey Bay.

A special Sunday Brunch will be offered from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. March 31, with music provided by Boppa Nova on Kiewel's outdoor deck – weather permitting, of course.

The brunch will feature a wide variety of egg dishes, from Eggs Benedict to omelettes, breakfast favorites from cereal to French toast, even hamburgers and specialty sandwiches, in short anything on their extensive brunch menu.

Dinner will be served from 5 to 9 p.m. and will feature the entire regular menu with an Easter special: Traditional Baked Ham with Au Gratin Potatoes, fresh vegetable, soup and salad, all for just $12.95.

For reservations call Kiewel's at 372-6950.

Take a tip from Evon Cheng, Food & Beverage manager at the Inn at Spanish Bay: "There's always something special at The Inn at Spanish Bay!" And this Easter is no different.

At The Dunes, a special Easter Sunday Champagne Brunch from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. is staggering in its scope and quality.

For starters there's an assortment of chilled salads, a cheese board and smoked salmon and trout; then you can move on to delicious hot breakfast items, including Peach and Berries Compote; Sauteed Salmon with Scallions, Fresh Asparagus and Rice; Corn Bread topped with Poached Eggs, Ham and Corn Relish; Blackened Tilapia with Papaya and Cilantro Salsa, Mixed Beans and Polenta; Grilled Quail and Grilled Chicken Breast; Roast Beef Tenderloin with Wild Mushrooms; Cheese Ravioli with Smoked Duck; Citroen Orange Linguine with Prawns and Oriental Spices; Roast Leg of Lamb with Mint and Garlic Pesto; and Glazed Ham with Spicy Apple Sauce.

An alternative, Evon suggests is to take in the "Easter Luncheon Extraordinaire" served from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the companion restaurant, The Bay Club.

There you can start with a variety of Antipasto, Stracciatella (egg soup), Risotto with Asparagus, or Ravioli or Capollini (Angel Hair pasta). For entrees take your pick from Grilled Loin of Lamb with Pancetta Bacon over Sweet Peppers and Snap Peas with Goat Cheese Flan; Roast Duck Breast over Pan-Seared Greens with Carmelized Onion Vinaigrette and Soft Polenta; Steamed Halibut with Marinated Tomato and Fennel with Yellow and Green Beans; Veal Medallions with Artichoke in Basil Sauce with Italian Fried Tomatoes.

And you can't possibly stop there: you'll have to partake of a delicacy from the dessert buffet, which features chocolate, chocolate and more chocolate, as well as a variety of tarts, cakes and pies.

In addition to all that, the Easter Bunny will make a special appearance for photographs for children of all ages. Entertainment will be featured throughout the day. Reservations are recommended and complimentary valet parking will be provided. Cost is $32.50 per person, children under 12, $15 for The Dunes; $36.50 per person, children under 12 $15 for The Bay Club. Call 647-7500, ext. 56 for The Dunes, ext. 51 for The Bay Club.

Chamber ensembles will compete at Sunset Theater

THE 20TH ANNUAL Carmel Chamber Music Competition will take place on Saturday, March 30, beginning at 1 p.m. Winners of the competition will perform in the Winners' Concert on Sunday, March 31, at 3 p.m. Both events will take place in Sunset Center Theater, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, and are sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

ROSARIO MAZZEO serves as judge/coordinator of the 20th Annual Carmel Chamber Music Competition. Admission is free to the auditions, which begin at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 30 in Sunset Theater, Carmel.

The Carmel Chamber Music Competition is national with groups from the nation's foremost university music departments and conservatories entering the competition. Of these, ensembles with various combinations of instruments are selected to compete for the awards in the Saturday auditions.

There are two first prizes of $2,500 each. The Monterey County Cultural Council award is for strings, with or without keyboard or woodwind. The Angie Machado award is for woodwinds or brass. The second award is the $1,750 Florence Allen Award, and the third is the $1,250 W. Frederick Schaad Award.

On Saturday the finalists will be judged by the following nationally prominent musicians:

Rosario Mazzeo, judge-coordinator, is an internationally known musician, educator, lecturer, author, inventor, and executive.

Denis De Coteau is Music Director and Conductor of the San Francisco Ballet Orchestra.

William Corbett-Jones, a world renowned pianist, is on the San Francisco State University faculty.

Bonnie Hampton, a nationally acclaimed cellist, is a faculty member of the San Francisco Conservatory.

James Winter is a member of the Fresno Symphony and past president of the International Society of Horn Players.

Single tickets for non-members at the Sunday Winners' Concert are $5 at the door before the concert. The Saturday Auditions are open to the public and free of charge.

Carmel Music Society presents Alicia de Larrocha in concert

SPANISH PIANIST Alicia de Larrocha will perform Monday, April 1 in Carmel's Sunset Theater under the auspices of the Carmel Music Society. The 8 p.m. concert is dedicated to the memory of Carmel pianist Angie Machado. Tickets are $50.

THE CARMEL Music Society presents pianist Alicia de Larrocha at Sunset Theater in Carmel. Her recital will begin at 8 p.m. Monday, April 1.

De Larrocha's program will be composed of music commemorating the bicentennial of the death of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Spanish compositions will follow the intermission.

A native of Barcelona, de Larrocha made her first appearance in 1929, at the age of 6. The great Artur Rubinstein was a close friend of her teacher and predicted a great career for her, encouraging her to continue her studies with Frank Marshall. In 1947, she first toured outside of Spain; she made her British debut in 1953, followed by her American debut in 1955, with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Alfred Wallenstein. Although she subsequently received the Paderewski Prize in London, as well as international honors for her early recordings of Granados and Albeniz, it was only in 1965 on her return to the United States for what amounted to a second American debut, that she earned a reputation as one of the world's greatest classical artists.

Now an exclusive recording artist for BMG Classics (RCA Victor Red Seal), de Larrocha is recording the complete Mozart piano sonatas and commencing recording the Mozart piano concertos for that label. Previously, she recorded extensively for London/Decca and has the distinction of winning three Grammy Awards, two of them in successive years.

Perceval the Holy Fool and the Quest for the Holy Grail

Perceval, the Holy Fool is a condensation of a number of tales, myths and legends into an interpretation of one man's quest for the source of life. Perceval is written and performed by a single person, Thane Christopher. Its roots stem back to the 13th century Welsh Mabinogion.

The one-man play wil be staged at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, March 28-29, in Portofino Cafe. The cafe is located downstairs in the Pacific Grove Plaza, 620 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. Admission is $5. For details, call 373-7379.

Hemingway Reminisces

The Staff Players Repertory Company presents James Mitchell Lear in Hemingway Reminisces. The one-man play will be staged nightly through Saturday, March 30, at the Indoor Forest Theatre, Carmel.

According to Lear, his inspiration to create this play came from Ernest Hemingway's granddaughter, Margaux. He has since presented it around the world.

Lear, in his 35 years as an actor, has appeared in theater productions on Broadway, in stock and touring companies in the United States and Europe, and appeared in several films.

Hemingway Reminisces will be staged at 8 p.m. The setting is a bar in Cuba, in summer 1960.

Admission is $10 general, $8 for students and senior citizens, and $6 for Staff Players subscribers.

The Indoor Forest Theater is at Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel. For details, call 624-1531.

Kathy Deskin-Jacobs directs this comic look at the last day on earth, a conversation with God and His search for a new Adam and Eve. The comedy features Julie Hughett, Michael Jacobs, Jeff Heyer, Jim Webber, Mickie Mosley Moorer, Craig Dunbar and Kevin Hanstick.

Biloxi Blues

Chris Anderson reprises his role of Eugene Morris Jerome in the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre Company production of Neil Simon's Biloxi Blues in the Main Stage Theater at Monterey Peninsula College.

Biloxi Blues continues the saga of Jerome, Simon's alter-ego, which began in Brighton Beach Memoirs. The comedy/drama finds Eugene learning about life as an army recruit in Biloxi, Miss. He continues to write his memoirs as he and five other young men suffer under a hardnosed drill instructor preparing them for battle in World War II.

The young writer encounters anti-Semitism for the first time, and falls in love for the first time.

Peter DeBono directs the cast which includes David Miller, Maura Leos, Cassie Reese, Dean Winston, Todd Goodrich, Kent Carlson, Jim Affinito and Andrew Amos.

Biloxi Blues will be presented at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays through March 30.

Military personnel and their spouses who are assigned to area installations are invited to attend the production as guests of MPC.

Due to mature themes and language, this production is recommended for theatergoers 18 and older.

Tickets are $12 general admission, $9 for students/military/senior citizens. Reservations may be made through Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561 or the MPC box office, 646-4213.

The musical is directed by Leslie Williams with musical direction by Nick Williams and choreography by Cassy Reed.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 5:30 p.m. Sundays through March 31 at the New Wharf Theatre, Monterey.

Bash for Cash

THE CLUB of Monterey mounts one of its rare live music shows, this one a benefit for public television station KCAH-25, a fledgling public access station that lives up to the phrase "public access."

This "Bash for Cash," set for an 8 p.m. Thursday, March 28 kick-off, features three of the area's best original rock bands, The Young Presidents, Lovers and Strangers and Bombay.

In what has got to be the one of the state's unique operations, KCAH-25 operates out of a van and offers a homegrown mix of entertainment and information programming, all helmed by Jerry Ford, yes, the same man who brings us the wildly eclectic Pelican Ball every year. Any television station involving Jerry Ford has my undying support and should have yours too. Many have likened it to a television version of radio station KAZU, which has grown from a small 10-watt station in Pacific Grove to one of the Central California's best non-commercial stations.

Tickets are only $6 and are available at the door. Do you realize that's only $2 per band? A bargain in any day or age. For information on the bash or KCAH-25 itself, call 754-1540.

IF THIS year's Academy Awards telecast Monday seemed to lack a little pizzaz – no streakers, controversial remarks or refusals to accept – it made up for it in warmth and emotionalism, or as my girlfriend would say, "nose tickles."

Whoopi Goldberg's enthusiasm and gratitude in winning Best Supporting Actress was refreshing to see; Sophia Loren looks as glamorous and radiant as ever at age 56; Bill Crystal was witty and clever without being snide or negative; Costner's two touching and funny acceptance speeches (for Best Picture and Director); and Jeremy Irons' class and humility in accepting the Best Actor statuette.

This year's ceremony lacked the surprise of past years, except in a few categories, but it had its share of highlights – and lowlights – so here are a few in no particular order:

Best dress: Jody Foster's daring and revealing, open-fronted...uh...outfit, one that contrasted sharply with Best Actress winner Kathy Bates' black velvet, covered-to-the-neck gown. And I'm no fashion maven, but Sophia, Geena Davis, Madonna, and super model Cindy Crawford all looked smashing.

Worst dress: Jody Foster's daring and revealing, open-fronted...uh...strips of cloth, designed by none other than Giorgio Armani. Worst Dress, Non-Televised Division goes to annual winner, former grade-B actress Edy Williams, who apparently looked like a lumpy banana in her yellow leotard.

Best Acceptance Speech: Toss-up between Costner and Goldberg; no pretensions or airs here, just warm-hearted gratitude and excitement.

Worst Acceptance Speech: The costume designer who accepted for Cyrano de Bergerac – couldn't understand a word she said, of course, she was speaking in French, but you would have thought they'd provide a translator. Joe Pesci comes in a close second for his one-liner: "It's my privilege, thank you." That's it, Joe?

Worst Acceptance Speech – Not Their Fault Division: Four men came up to accept the award for Best Special Effects; only two got to speak, make that two and a half, one did get three words out of his mouth before he was cut off.

Biggest Surprise Winner: Has to be Kathy Bates, a relative unknown, who beat out such household names as Joanne Woodward, Julia Roberts, Angelica Huston and Meryl Streep. Second was that Cyrano didn't win for Best Foreign Film.

Least Surprising Winner: Dances With Wolves for Best Picture and to a lesser degree Costner for Best Director. Almost everyone picked Dances to win Best Picture, virtually from the day it was announced. When Costner won the Director's Guild award that cinched it for him as Best Director and Best Picture; rarely do the two not match in the Academy's history.

Biggest Disappointment: That Martin Scorsese didn't win Best Director for his powerful GoodFellas. Three times nominated, three times a bridesmaid, the last time he was beaten by a first-time director too – actor Robert Redford for Ordinary People over his masterpiece, Raging Bull. You tell me which film has more longevity and significance. GoodFellas only win came with Pesci's Best Supporting performance.

Who Cares Award: The Hunt for Red October won for Best Sound Effects Editing. Didn't they just use the sound effects from the '60s TV show Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea? Their competition: Flatliners and Total Recall.

Big Loser Award: Francis Ford Coppola, nominated for seven awards and came up empty-handed. Awakenings had three nominations, no awards.

Most Warmly Received Award: The audience was really pulling for Whoopi to win and when she did, the place exploded. For that win Whoopi also wins the Comeback of the Year Award.

Local Boy Makes Good Award: Well, San Francisco is as close as we get this year, with Bay Area resident Steven Okazaki who won Best Documentary Short Subject for his Days of Waiting, the story of Estelle Peck Ishigo, a Caucasian woman who spent four years in World War II internment camps to be with her Japanese-American husband.

Well, that's about it for this year, see you next year when I'm hoping for big wins for Jonathan Demme's Silence of the Lambs.

DEANNA BOGART, formerly of the popular Western Swing band Cowboy Jazz, was born to boogie, which she'll do playing both piano and saxophone Sunday, April 7 at Doc Rickett's Lab on Cannery Row. Tickets are $5 at the door and show starts at 9 p.m.

DOC RICKETTS Lab on Cannery Row seems to get busier and busier with each passing week.

Every week they've booked not only some of the top local rock bands (The Cubes, Lovers and Strangers, BackTrax, and The Young Presidents), but some of the top recording club acts in the country, including in recent months, Kris Kristofferson, Chris Isaak, Buckwheat Zydeco, John Mayall, and Flock of Seagulls.

Now they've added a Spring Jazz Series that will feature the likes of saxophonist Carol Chaikin (April 2), fusion artists Fattburger (April 9), flutist Tim Weisberg (April 23), and, perhaps the biggest name in jazz right now, trumpeter Wynton Marsalis (April 16). More details on the jazz series can be found in my colleague John Detro's weekly "Jazz Tides" column.

With The Club of Monterey long out of the running as a venue for live nationally known recording acts, only Doc Ricketts in the Monterey area has had the gumption to pick up the baton and run with it. Of course there are a dozen other clubs in the area that feature excellent live music, but none does so with the potent mixture of good local bands and top recording acts like Doc's.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Storm of jazz

ANOTHER BLESSED rainstorm roars down as I write these words. The storm of high-level jazz bookings deserves attention too. Phil Woods, Wynton Marsalis, Richie Cole — not bad.

And that Paul Masson Summer Series again will feature jazz heavyweights. You may wish to clip-and-save the following roundup.

Phil's latest quintet will play Monterey Jazz Festival in September (9/20-21-22). MJF honcho Jimmy Lyons says the Sunday night show was completed when this signed contract arrived.

Woods thus joins 1991 headliners like Diz, Diane Schuur, Basie Orchestra, Modern Jazz Quartet, Jon Hendricks and Company, Lighthouse All-Stars, Carol Sloane, Chick Corea, on and on. Tickets go on sale April 1 for all five arena programs: $127.50 (first section), $121.50 (second), $101.75 (third). Contact the fest office at our fairgrounds.

Columnist Mac McDonald came by his scoop honestly — through steady coverage of non-jazz bookings at Doc Ricketts Lab near Cannery Row. Young superstar Wynton Marsalis will front a nine-member band there next month (4/16). That Tuesday night event carries an admission cost of $23 per.

Dave Svec describes his function at Ricketts Lab as "national talent buyer." Dave pledges "strong efforts to establish a real jazz series." He says the Marsalis personnel will be announced within the same hour that he gets names from Wynton's PR people.

Wynton's probably the most *bank*able jazz player on the planet at present. I can think of much less famous trumpeters who might could burn him at an open jam (Charles Tolliver for one), but this isn't an essay on comparative skills or the business understructure. Wynton's smart and movie star stylish and a caring godfather of the neo-traditionalist movement.

If pianist Marcus Roberts comes on the road trip — he was with Wynton before a separate career bloomed — I'll be there an hour early just to say howdy and thanks. The latest Roberts CD demonstrates (solo) the musical links between Jelly Roll Morton and Monk and Ellington. It's a wondrous package and he's an unassuming genius.

Other series items mentioned by Dave — Fattburger (4/9 and $16), flutist Tim Weisberg (4/23 and $15). Svec's commitment seems stone serious. Congrats.

Just off a Russian tour, Richie Cole will work the Hidden Valley Music Series on April's first Friday night (4/5). The witty alto saxist studied with Phil Woods and always pleases crowds. Tickets ($10 apiece) available at the door that evening.

The Paul Masson Series happens at the beautiful winery in hills above Saratoga. Tickets go on sale through the mail very shortly (4/8). To get on this list, call 1-741-5181 (any time day or night). Ticketmaster will start its normal activity May 5.

The jazz/blues portion of an amazingly varied roster includes Bobby McFerrin and the San Jose Symphony (5/31-6/2), George Benson and Diane Reeves (6/6-9), Miriam Makeba (6/18), Take Six (7/16), Robert Cray (7/26-28), Wynton and Marcus (8/1-3).

George Shearing with Joe Pass and Joe Williams (8/30-9/1), Ray Charles and Etta James (9/5-8), Dave Koz plus Larry Carlton and Rippingtons (9/15), Chet Atkins and Stanley Jordon (9/19-20), Modern Jazz Quartet (9/21-22), Chick Corea (10/4).

Chet's a killer jazz guitarist when he feels like it.

The setting will steal your breath.

Have fun.

MUCH HAS been written about the late Ruth Fenton. And justly so. Before her tough will lost out to cancer earlier this month, Ruth created the organization which became Youth Music Monterey. Two things were stronger than the pain: the lady's faith, and an absolute conviction that musical training must be there for any young person wishing same.

Her awards and accomplishments were listed in Dave Leland's story. What might this column add? That Ruth loved her five grandchildren tremendously.

One afternoon, Ruth came by KRML Jazz Radio to show grandson Casey where various programs originated. I was on-air and Casey said he'd like to do the weather report. We hooked up a second microphone. The small boy handled that task right well, later introducing a few tunes.

Ruth knew for a lengthy while that her body was on its way out. As Casey took care of announcer business, she beamed and beamed. There were proud grandma tears in her eyes.

Ruth also was part of an informal phone network that met the needs of local families during individual hard times. She didn't reveal this years-long service until we had lunch downtown and were handed the last check we'd ever quibble over. And then she brought up the matter to stress the goodness of someone else.

Ruth told an interviewer in January of last year: "You have to have Johann Sebastian Bach and Duke Ellington in your life or you really don't have music...The gifted child is a handicapped child who doesn't get any of the sympathy or understanding that children with other handicaps usually receive...There's always another child who needs another music lesson."

I'm glad she had those studio moments with Casey and the jazz.

SIGHT BITES: Monterey Peninsula College announces continuation of its jazz lecture series with talks by faculty members Bill Minor and Don Schamber (4/18 and 5/15 respectively). Bill's an English instructor, jazz writer, poet and pianist who'll discuss his jazz tour of Russia last year. Don, MPC Creative Arts Division chairman and a nationally-respected arranger, will consider big bands. More details when each event draws near.

Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz offers a superb duo on Monday night (4/1) — vocalist Sheila Jordan and bassist Harvie Swartz. She's simply among the most creative singers ever; he complements her flights with brilliant technique. Eight o'clock kick; $12 per; Center Stage Ticketing.

Kuumbwa's Friday evening series features the Dave Gregoric Quartet with vocalist Anne Whittington. It's $5 apiece at the door only.

Barbara Murphy's Portofino Coffee House has the acoustic blues of Dale Miller (3/30). Eight o'clock that evening and $5 per.

Kiewel's Restaurant in Heritage Harbor offers jazz brunch on Sundays (11-3). The group Boppa Nova, fronted by keyboardist James Forkner, has grown from a duo to a quintet during its extended run there.

Monterey Bay Club books Terry Hanck and his Soulrockers (4/4-5-6). Before then — singer Kevin Feeney's band (3/28-29-30).

Recommended night sounds — Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra at Sharky's (Mondays), jam sessions hosted by bassist Norm Ross at The Firehouse (Thursdays and Saturdays), Brazilian percussionist Helcio Milito and friends at Spanish Bay (Thursdays through Saturdays), pianist Ace Hill and bassist Bryan McConnell at Doubletree Lounge (Thursdays through Saturdays), flugelhornist Brian Stock and bandstand pals at Portofino (Sundays), trumpet pro Ron Coolidge's unit at Shanty Malone's (Tuesdays) followed by the Jackie Coon band (Fridays and Saturdays) and Papa Jake (Sundays), Monica Harle Trio at Highlands Inn (Fridays and Saturdays).

Opening the lineup for April will be Sting and ZZ Top on the 1st. OK, they can't make it so veteran blues-boogie masters Canned Heat will do the honors starting at 9 p.m.

Best known for their appearances at Woodstock and the Monterey Pop Festival and their songs, Going Up the Country and On the Road Again, Canned Heat has gone through several membership changes over the years, including the deaths of Alan "Blind Owl" Wilson and Bob "The Bear" Hite as well as the defection of guitarist Henry Vestine.

But drummer Fito de la Parra and bassist Larry Taylor are still around, and they've added none other than Harvey Mandel, a great blues guitarist in his own right. They're touring in support of their new album Reheated and flush from their success backing John Lee Hooker on The Hook's hit album, The Healer.

Following Canned Heat, Doc's has on tap Carol Chaikin, April 2; The Young Presidents (voted Best Local Band in Coast Weekly), April 3 and 4; The Cubes, featuring Thom Ayres, recently voted Monterey's Best Musician by two different publications, April 5 and 6 (as well as March 28-30); boogie pianist and saxophonist Deanna Bogart, formerly of that excellent Western Swing band, Cowboy Jazz, April 7; The Bold Dogs, which features former Snail vocalist/guitarist Bob O'Neill; Lovers and Strangers, April 11 as well as April 18, opening for up-and-coming Seattle-based acoustic rockers The Posies; Mr. Harmonica himself, Norton Buffalo on April 15; Grammy Award-winning country stars Highway 101 on April 22; Bob O'Neill then returns with longtime partner Ken Kraft on April 24; and Portland, Ore. bluesman Lloyd Jones makes the trip to the peninsula April 25.

Information for any of Doc Ricketts' Lab shows can be had by calling 649-4241. Tickets are available at a variety of locations, including at the club itself, all BASS/Ticketmaster locations, Center Stage, Recycled Records, Lighthouse Records, and Do Re Mi in The Barnyard.

SHANTY MALONE'S in Carmel Valley (at Valley Hills Center), is branching out from its usual jazz offerings, serving up a dose of eclectic rock Friday nights starting March 29.

That's when Vegetarian Alternative, a local "rock-reggae dance music" outfit (that's according to band member Pat Clark), will rage on from 9 p.m. to midnight every Friday until...well who knows? Saturdays have been more or less set aside for the Kindred Spirits Community Dance featuring Boppa Nova, who as the fliers say, play music "from the '40s to the '90s." That's quite a range.

THEY MAY live in the shadow of their better-known neighbors, but the Villa Montalvo need not take a back seat to them after a quick perusal of their eye-popping 1991 Performing Arts Season schedule.

Performers this season at Villa Montalvo, located in Saratoga only a few miles from the popular Paul Masson Summer Series up the road, include:

Michael Hedges, Spalding Gray, Ottmar Liebert, SpyroGyra, Rippingtons, The Five Blind Boys from Alabama, The Persuasions, Duke Ellington Orchestra, Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Beausoleil, Vocal Motion with Voicestra, David Benoit, Marcus Roberts, Jon Hendricks, Ladysmith Black Mambazo, Diane Schuur, Branford Marsalis, David Grisman/Mark O'Conner, and Poncho Sanchez. And that doesn't include their Emerging Artists Series, their Mozart, Shakespeare and Oakland Ballet performances and their Chinese Magic Revue!

For more information or to obtain their free season poster/brochure call 1-741-3428. Tickets can be purchased by mail, by phone (after April 1), in person at Villa Montalvo, at the door (good luck), or at all BASS/TM outlets.
